R ED RICE'S—SUNDAY, FEB. 14. WE are advertising that we are selling bedroom sets and other furniture very cheap; cheaper than such goods were offered before. In order that there may be no chance for mischeaper than such goods were offered before. In order that there may be no chance for misunderstanding or misquotations or mistake we have adopted the plan of marking the selling price in plain figures on the mirror of each and every bedroom set fact atone match these very bedroom set fact atone match these very bedroom set fact atone match these covery bedroom set fact atone match these better goods for the money than Red Rice, bring them to our stores and show them the goods. On Thursday of last week we sold among other goods a bedroom set for $25, such an one as issually sold for $23, to $40 at other places. Heavy made, solid oak, with great bevel mirrors—all new, mind-you. The huyer hardig occasion to go to one of being the had got in a bedroom set at Red Rice's, a salesman boasted that he would sell him as good a set for $22, but the sharp salesman struck the wrong man, for the buyer remarked that he was thinking of buying some more bedroom sets, and would take twenty sets like the one or as good as the one he had bought for the price the "smartle had offered them at and pay spo cash. Course the salesman backe of them, nor would the house he works for permit the sale of such sets for less than $30 to $35. But Red Rice must sell. Our necessity is your opportunity. Our great stores are crowded with good goods that must be turned into cash. We have most everything in furniture as well as thousands of other, undered to the summor sets, hundreds of the summor shall at hade a face, and while the house. There is more than a hundred bedroom sets, hundreds of the summor shall at hade a face, and while the salesman grown bulliard tables, chairs, tables, wardrobes, mirrors, baby buggies, saddles, harness, in fact, you can hardly want but what you will find at Red Rice's, and kind reader, it will pay you to anticipate a future need by visiting Red Rice's now while everything is going so extra cheep. There was a new marking down of prices on Saturday, and everything in plain figures on Raturday, and everything in plain Suicide of a Wealthy Mine Owner in Eldorado County.

The Clemens Contempt Case Comes Up Again at 'Frisco.

A Prospect That San Diego's Suspender Bank May Soon Resume Busine The Coming Baseball Season

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13,— By the As sociated Press.] The Chronicle says that Sarah Althea Terry is hopelessly insane. She is the woman who ac-quired such notoriety from her suit gainst the late million aire, William F. Sharon, whose wife she claimed to be She afterward married Judge Terry, who had been her counsel in the Sharon case, and Terry was killed by Deputy United States Marshal Nagle while at tacking Judge Stephen, J. Field, who had decided a suit against Mrs. Terry. She came here from Stockton on Thursday night, and is now at the home of R. E. Culbreth, editor of the City Argus. Mrs. Terry sits up in bed and with a handkerchief, folded to represent a speaking trumpet, held to her mouth, holds imaginary conversations with spirits. On Friday night, while unguarded, she nearly escaped from the house without any clothes on. She sat four hours perched up on a bureau talking to spirits.

To a Chronicle reporter who saw her she told what the spirits said. She is attended by Dr. A. A. Gilmore, who says there is no doubt of her insanity.

AN OUTRAGE.

Sailors Badly Beaten for not Submitting to the Seamen's Union. San Francisco, Feb. 13.—[By the Asociated Press. | The American bark Colorado left here for Puget Sound this morning and thence to South America. Instead of taking a crew from the Coast Seamen's Union for Puget Sound, and then shipping a deep-water crew on the Sound, the captain signed a crew for the round trip. This was opposed by the Seamen's Union, and this morning when two sailors were being taken aboard the vessel an attack was made on them and John Curtin, a boarding-house man. The three were beaten unmercifully, and in a few minutes 100 men were fighting on the wharf. Deputy United States Shipping Commissioner Thorwald was roughly handled, and on the arrival of the police a number of the crew showed cuts and bruiser. No arrests were made.

ENDED HIS TROUBLES.

A Wealthy Mine Owner Commits Suicide by Hanging.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] The Evening Bee's Folsom special says that John Hancock, owner of the Negro Hill and Salmon Falls mining ditch, committed suicide by hanging, at his cabin at Negro Hill, above Mormon Island, yesterday about cock was engaged in a lawsuit with the Natowa Ditch Company for water rights and lost it. Hancock was a wealthy, well-known nancock was a weattry, well-known and popular man. The news of his suicide was only brought in this afternoon, and created a great sensation in this town. A man who worked for him named Daniel Phillray says that Hancock had been acting strangely for some time past, and he believed him to have been in anne. een insane.

An Ex-convict Arrested for Smuggling Opium Into San Quentin.
San Rafael, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press. | Last night between 12 and 1 o'clock Guard Alexander of San and I o'clock Guard Alexander of San Quentin prison saw a man sneaking behind lumber piles in the old brick yard west of the prison. He hailed the intruder, but lost sight of him in the darkness. Alexander began a search and found Henry Ray, an ex-convict, hiding in a pile of refuse. Ray was only yesterday discharged from the prison after a seven years' sentence for burglary committed in Alameda county. The guard arrested Ray and turned him over to the captain of the yard. In his possession was found a pound of copium possession was found a pound of opium and a liberal supply of tobacco; also a number of letters for inmates of the

This afternoon Ray was arrested by Coustable C. E. Mallon and brought here and lodged in jail. Ray appeared very crestfallen over his arrest, and, although admitting the facts before stated, says that he was ignorant of any crime being committed by carrying opium to the prison. He will be tried before Judge Duffley on Tuesday next,

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—The Post says that for the first time in the history of California the League home team this season will not be seen in the opening game at the Haight street grounds. It was originally intended to have the San Francisco and San José clubs play here on the afternoon of March 28, but Manager Robinson was so anxious to have his team of new "Colonels" appear be-fore the first audience of the season that the programme has been changed. The first game of this season in this city will be played between the San José and Oakland clubs. The opening game in the south will be between the San Francisco and Los Angeles teams.

Kern County Irrigation Projects.

Bakersfield, Feb. 13.—Haggin & Carr, who own 400,000 acres of land and claim a majority of the water in this county, consented today to permit a branch to be constructed from Kern Island Canal, which will irrigate about 50,000 acres of land next to the town 50,000 acres of land next to the town that has heretofore been desert. They have evidently been stimulated to this by the energy of officers of the Kern River Cañon Water Company and the Doherty or Baldwin people, who are about to construct their irrigation scheme that will irrigate the noted Weed Patch country and would cover both systems.

San Diego's Suspended Bank, San Diego, Feb. 13.—It will be definitely settled in a few days whether the California National Bank, which suspended here last fall, will resume business. Several meetings of stockholders have been held and one of the bank's officials has just returned from a trip East, where he consulted with Eastern stockholders. Today a telegram was sent to the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington stating that 90 per cent of the stockholders had agreed to assess themselves to assist the bank. If the Comptroller returns a tayorable answer the bank well. turn's a favorable answer the bank will resume business at once.

Narrow Escape from Death. SAN DIEGO, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Crosbie, wife of the captain of the American bark J. P. Carleton, accompanied by her niece, was driving along the Spreckels wharf today. A freight train which was backing up alongside the bunkers frightened the horse and the animal sprang into the water, drag-ging the buggy with him, but fortu-nately the two ladies jumped out at the last moment. In going overboard the horse freed himself from the vehicle and swam for the shore. A Swift Tugboat.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—The tug
Fearless, owned by Spreckels & Co., and stated to be the largest tugboat ever built in the United States, had her trial trip today and developed a speed of fifteen knots an hour. The Fearless is of steel, 145 feet in length, 26 feet in breadth of beam, and has a registered tonnage of 365 tons. The boat was built at the Union Iron Works, and is intended for general tugboat service.

CHARLOTTE (N. C.,) Feb. 13.—Near Asheville, on the Western North Carolina Railway, yesterday, three children were playing on the track in front of an approaching freight train. When their mother ran out to rescue them she and one child were ground to pieces and the other children were badly maimed.

Typhus Scourge in New York. New York, Feb. 18.—Physicians of the health department this afternoon discovered two more cases of typhus fever in an Essex street lodging-house.
They were Russian Hebrew emigrants.
Four cases have been reported from Newburgh, N. Y., all of them having landed from the steamer Massalia.

BLAZING HEAVENS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.-[By the Associated Press.] A gorgeous illumination of heavens was visible tonight in cities over a 1000 miles apart. It was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of aurora borealis or northern lights ever seen from American soil. Dispatches to the Associated Press show that the phenomenon stretched over the great belt of territory from Iowa to the Atlantic coast. The magnificent spectacle was scientifically observed at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Astronomi cal Director Hussey, of that institution, wires the Associated Press as follows: The brilliant red rose aurora visible tonight was not altogether unexpected. In a general way auroras have been expected about this time. Tonight's display naturally follows the appearance of the great sun spot which has been visible during the past week. Other auroral displays may be expected in the near future.

Other dispatches to the Associated Press show that the phenomenon was witnessed at New York, Hartford, Ct., witnessed at New York, Hartford, Ct., and other New England points; Louis-rille, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo, Detroit, Indianapoils and at Illinois and Iowa points, but not at St. Louis, Kansas City or Memphis. At Cincinnati it was first supposed that the city of Hamilton, twenty-five miles north, was on fire. Though not seen at St. Paul or Minneapolis, the aurora was St. Paul or Minneapolis, the aurora was plainly witnessed at Milwaukee. The peculiar disturbance known to tele-graphers as an electric storm greatly hampered the working of wires.

McGlynn May go to Rome.

New Haven (Ct.,) Feb. 13—Dr. Edward McGlynn, in an interview today, said that now that Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of the Propaganda, who was prejudiced against him (McGlynn,) was dead, he expected soon to be invited to a conference in Rome. He had reason to hope, he said, that he would be re-stored to the ministry, "without re-tracting the political and economic truths which I have preached and still preach." preach."

French Merchants Displayed Renewed Hostility Toward the Exposition-The Emperor of Germany Interested in the Fair.

By Telegraph to The Times.
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] At the meeting of the California World's Fair Commissioners today Secretary Thompson announced that fifteen county associations had been formed with a view to securing a good representation of their sections at the fair. He recommended that two or three men of prominence visit other sections of the State to influence the for-mation of similar associations. After some discussion the matter was left with the secretary with power to act.

The following were then nominated as a board of managers to act in conjunction with the commissioners: Mrs. John D. Reed, Mendocino county; Mrs. V. S. Bradley, Nevada county; Mrs. Amelia Marcellus, Alameda county; Mrs. Amelia Marcellus, Alameda county; Ella Cummins, San Francisco county; Mrs. E. O. Smith, San José; Mrs. Dr. Wilder, Los Angeles; Mrs. Flora Kimball, National City, San Diego county. Alfred LaMotte of Glen Ellen was empowered to visit those interested in fish and game and endeavor to secure an appropriate exhibit; and the Floral and the Floral county.

an appropriate exhibit; and the Floral Society, which asked for an appropri-ation of $25,000, was invited to sub-mit a detailed plan for a floral exhibit. A communication was received from Vice-President M. H. de Young suggest-ing that the commission provide the necessary entertainment for the Na-tional Board of Control, which would be invited to hold its next meeting in San Francisco.

Mr. McMurray was named as a committee to convey plans for the State building to Chicago, and the commission adjourned until March 9.

What Santa Clara County is Doing

SAN JOSE, Feb. 13.-At the meeting of the supervisors on Monday there will be appointed a number of prominent tax-payers as the Santa Clara County World's Fair Association, and active steps will be taken to get up a first-class exhibit for the Chicago Exposition. The Board of Trade has now on hand a splendid collection of selected fruits in jars and other products which it has decided to turn over to the commissioners when named by the Supervisors, and this will form the nucleus of the exhibit. Some time ago a private corporation was formed under the name of the Santa Clara County World's Fire Association, and an effort was made to get money from the county but there was strong opposition to giving public funds to the benefit of a private concern, and the Supervisors refused to grant the uppropriation. When an authorized commission is formed all legitimate expenses incurred will be provided for.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 .- After hearing from engineer officers the Senate Committee on Commerce decided to recommend the adoption of a most liberal policy for the improvement of the Mississippi River. After a thorough consideration of the subject it was decided that the bill recently introduced by Senator Gibson of Louisiana was better Senator Gibson of Louisjana was better adapted to secure satisfactory results than any other. As it will be reported to the Senate, the bill makes an appropriation of $15,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River.

The committee also authorized Senator Dolph to report favorably his bill appropriating $1,750,000 for the completion of the work of improvement at the Cascades on the Columbia

THE Chattanooga Times says of Hill that the Democracy will not send "a little trickster to the White House. On the authority of another Democratic paper, the Nashville American, Tammany is "the vilest organization of toughs and thieves on the earth."

THE New York Sun says a bill has been railroaded through the National House of Representatives, by the terms of which any publication or disclosure concerning a public official, "made for the purpose of ridicule or revenge,' can be punished as blackmail. will considerably limit the duties of the newspapers, since nobody will be allowed to make the public official ridiculous except himself.

THE Chicago Times demands a Western candidate for President on the Democratic ticket. Seven times in succes sion the nomination has gone to New York, and only once with a favorable result. The Republicans have chosen their successful candidate from the Central West. The Chicago organ has had enough of New York nominees, and calls upon the Democracy to recognize the fact that the Mississippi Valley is now the seat of empire. It names as available candidates Palmer, Boies and Vilas.

H. M. LA Rue of Sacramento is a candidate for the position of superintendent of the Viticultural Department of the World's Fair. Mr. La Rue has has officiated as superintendent of the State Fair, and, in that capacity, has commanded the confidence of the horseracing fraternity. It is urged as an especial mark of his fitness for the viticultural superintendency that he is not a wine-maker or a wine-dealer. These commendations may be considered not exactly apropos by some people, but Mr. La Rue is something of an office-seeker and this may cover all other shortcomings.

A BILL introduced in the Virginia Legislature, which provides for the appointment of a woman physician in each of the State hospitals, is opposed by the people of the Old Commonwealth on the ground that it is a "Yankee notion." And yet, the Stockton Mail observes, women are absurd enough to become patients at these same hospitals, the sickness of women not being exclusively a Yankee notion. Some day these F. F. V's. will wake up and be almost astonished to death to ascertain that they are living in a century which recognizes woman as an intelligent being, with the right of making a living in any way for which her intellect fits her.

Some very pronounced spots on the sun have been developed within the past few days, and may be easily seen through a telescope. The Rochester (N. Y.) Unusual magnetic disturbance has also been noted. The return in the early part of January was signalized by earthquake shocks in Italy, and profound disturbance of the magnetic needle on the 6th. REV. BROOKE HEREFORD recently sailed from Boston for England, but before leaving he preached on "Things That Have Stirred Me." It turned out that the "thing" that had most "stirred" the preacher in Boston was its ignorance; its blind, senseless ignorance. "It is pitiful," said he, "the way Boston society talks and thinks about the West." Mr. Hereford then went on to "stir" Boston for the way Boston had "stirred" him. He described the Bostonians as speaking of the West as the "fashionable Romans of the later empire talked of the Germans and Goths, who were yet strong than they and were to be the very makers of the new and greater world." In other words the reverend gentleman makes it out that Boston has the big-head.

It is a practice at each of the public schools in the city to keep the United States flag flying, either from a pole on the building or from a mast in the yard. It has been suggested as a means of investing the emblem with something of its proper significance in the youthful minds that a color-guard should be appointed at each school. This distinction might be given as a reward of merit, or it might go the rounds of the school in rotation. Without doubt the youngsters would consider it a great honor. The guard might consist of three boys and three girls, and, in that case, it should be the duty of the boys to see that the flag is raised and taken down at the proper times, and of the girls to take charge of it when not in service. This would not only imbue the young people with a regard for their country's emblem, but it would instil habits of promptness and reliability into their minds. also conduce to the longevity of the flag. #### Anotheosis of the Politician

In the Review of Reviews for the current month are two articles on Senator David Bennett Hill of New York. One is written by a friend and partisan, and is notoriously biased in his favor; the other is by a political opponent, and goes to the opposite extreme. It is probable that the actual frozen truth concerning Mr. Hill lies somewhere between the two extremes. There is no question that Mr. Hill is approving himself a Napoleon in politics. The proof of his extraordinary ability lies in his phenomenal success. To those who gauge men by this criterion alone, undoubtedly Mr. Hill is a beau ideal; but those who judge by the methods which lead to success will estimate him in an inverse ratio. The more brilliant a man is, if his talents be diverted into wrong channels the more dangerous he is. The more pronounced his success by such methods the more pernicious his example, the more potent for evil.

Mr. Hill is described as a man 49 years of age, of medium height and compact, square-shouldered figure. His complexion is waxen pale. His head is round like a bullet and shiny bald like a tonsured monk, and is well set on a rather thick neck, which is scarred on one side by a gash given years ago by an infuriated caller. His eyes are faded, bluish-gray, deep set and close to his nose. They are restless, glittering, cunning eyes that can not endure a steady gaze. Under the direct look, even of a casual caller, they uneasily wander from point to point, as if consciously unwilling that their depths should be explored. These crafty eyes and the sinister expression about the base of his nose and corners of his mouth convey an impression at the first meeting to a keen observer distinctly disagreeable. Mr. dresses with great care, after the approved fashions, but with subdued taste. Mr. Hill has a pleasant voice and an entertaining manner toward those with whom he is familian and with those upon whom he is desirous of making a pleasant impression. On topics of interest to him he is an easy and entertaining conversationalist, ready at repartee, quick to see a point, precise and clear in statement and copious in diction. He has a dry amounting at times almost to wit. His range of information is by no means wide. He makes no pretence to scholarship, even in law and politics. He wastes no force on mere culture.

Mr. Hill is a man of regular habits and frugal tastes. He does not smoke or chew tobacco. He does not use wine or strong drink; yet he is a generous host, and his table abounds in good things both to eat and to drink. He is a bachelor, and more than a bachelor; he is a woman-hater. These vir tues should be carefully catalogued, for they constitute the entire list of virtues in his character about which there is no room for an honest difference of opinon, and there may be some who think that the last on the list should be ex cluded as being not altogether a highly creditable disposition. He is not a church member, but, under provocation, he is profane. He is fond of the theater and of baseball. He does not affect the society of superior men and women. The men with whom he has surrounded himself for years, and with whom he seems to prefer to associate, are men inferior to himself; generally very young men, and not always very good oung men.

Discussing his most prominent characteristic his unadmiring biographer

He has only one grand passion, and to that he is devoted with all the powers of his being. In that he lives and moves. For that he works with a singleness of purpose and an intensity of application rarely exhibited. That passion is the political preferment of David B. Hill. Not being married, he has no family to distract him. His parents are dead. His brethren are scattered far. His profession has not been touched for seven years. Eating or sleeping, walking or driving, at home or abroad, wherever he is, all the energies of his nature are absorbed in his political career. Few men in public life make politics their religion, their wife, their father and mother, their family and little ones, their recreation and their regular pursuit, their toil in winter and their hobby in summer. This is, however, just what is done by David heart, by the devil of his own ambition. Self is his center and self is his circumference. Altruism in politics is above his comprehension.

The higher purposes of party, of the State, of the Nation, mean nothing to him apart from their possible bearings upon the interest of David B. Hill, His fondest boast is, "I am a Democrat." But this statement should be taken, not as he says it, but as he means it. Democracy to him does not stand, and never has stood, so much for a code of fixed and definite principles as for opposition to Republicanism. He is a Democrat only in this, that he is not a Republican. With Mr. Hill the order of devotion is not country, State, party, self; but self, party, State, country, and again self. His party has become dear to him, not for any love which he entertains for its underlying principles or for its achievements in history, not for what it has done and is doing, and may do for David B. Hill.

Mr. Hill began the study of law about

B. Hill.

Mr. Hill began the study of law about the time he began the practice of politics, which was about 1860. At the opening of the war and during its progress he was a violent anti-war Democrat. He was, in fact, what is, so unpleasantly known to history as a "copperhead." In 1862 he moved to Elmira, where he was admitted to the bar in 1864. His characteristic industry enabled him to make rapid progress. He was an indefatigable worker, whatever may be thought of the scrupulousness of his methods. He became a keen lawyer and enjoyed a large and successful practice. Political matters interested him and absorbed a large portion of his time. He soon secured quite a political following among the tough element; and saloon-keepers and the men they controlled were always strong for Hill. He understood them and they understood him.

He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1874-2, and, in that capacity, was the thick-and-thin friend of Mr. Hill began the study of law about pacity, was the thick-and-thin friend of Boss Tweed. It was currently understood that it was through Tweed that Hill came into possession of an interest in the Elmira Gazette, of which paper he afterward secured the complete con trol. At this time he also joined with the Democratic members of the Legislature in voting to withdraw the con sent of the State of New York to the adoption of the fifteenth amendment. On the downfall of Tweed Mr. Hill lost little time in cultivating the friendship of Tweed's mortal enemy, Samuel J. Tilden, from whom he received very material assistance in his political strug gles in Chemung county through a term of years.

Hill next served as Alderman in Elmira, and meanwhile built his political fences so well that he secured the place of Lieutenant-Governor when Cleveland was elected as Chief Executive of the State. When Cleveland went from the Governor's chair to the White House Hill became Governor. He managed his wires so well that he was elected Governor the next time, and during that incumbency he was chosen United States Senator.

It is believed, with reason, that n love is lost between Cleveland and Hill. Cleveland never had much respect for Hill, and Hill was always suspicious of Cleveland. In 1888 Hill was the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, and Cleveland for President of the United States. Whether Hill deliberately knifed the head of his party's ticket or not has never been developed to at certainty, but the presumption is strongly that way, for Hill polled 30,000 more votes in the State of New York than Cleveland did. This probably represented 15,000 devoted followers of Hill who voted for Harrison for President and for Hill for Governor. In this way every vote counted two in the summing up of differences between the respective votes. This represents Hill's loyalty to his party, and fully justifies the estimate of his selfishness as given above.

One does not need to search long for the upshot of this matter. Cleveland was shelved and Hill went forward in his march of triumph. The indefatigable worker gained the upper hand, and he knew how to make the most of his advantage. It is now apparent that he not only controls the Democratic political machinery of the State of New York, but he holds the interior lines in the national party. Cleveland is crowded out of his own State, so to speak, and resorts to the pitiful xpedient of swinging aroun circle of the Solid South with the purpose of creating an adventitious boom for himself. It will not amount Cleveland was thrown down when the 15,000 Hill voters in New York knifed him. The instigator of this treachery enjoys the spoils. In a certain way nothing succeeds like success and Hill is at present the successful man. Few people doubt now that Hill will secure the next Democratic nomination for President.

He will stand before the country as an exemplar of the ward politicianworker in the field of "practical politics" and an adept, in all its devious methods. Whether a majority of the voters of the United States will show that they are willing to accept such a low ideal remains to be seen. If they do, it will mark a distinct era in the de cadence of the country. It will waive an adieu to statesmanship, patriotism and a high standard of integrity as qualifications for our Chief Executive It will exalt treachery to party instead of fidelity. It will mean that Cataline, not Cicero, is foremost in our decaying Rome.

Today's Times.

THE TIMES this morning-of which more than 12,000 copies are printedcontains its usual full budget of varied and interesting matter, including those literary features which are laid before our readers every Sunday.

An article on members of Congres who have been prisoners of war is contributed by Frank G. Carpenter. It cannot fail to interest those who took part in the great struggle, and the general reader besides.

A complete description of "The Kite shaped Track" of the Santa Fé Railroad is specially interesting this morning, in favor, and explains the cause of the spots on the sun. The Youth's Department is complete and varied in contents, as usual. This page has become a great favorite with the young folks.

"The Saunterer" touches on matters that claim the attention of passers-by on our busy streets. For the serious reader the Lay Sermon directs the thoughts to subjects appropriate to the day. The ladies of the household will find in "Woman and Home" information and advice that they will know how to appreciate. An article on the citrus fair shows the progress that is being made with the coming exhibit. The condition of the crops throughout Southern California is set forth in the official bulletin. The dramatic news of the week will be found in its usual place. The large and ever-increasing budget of Southern California news includes letters from Pasadena, Pomona, San Bernardino. Orange, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

The society news of the week is fully covered. Timely editorials include one on Hill, the ambitious New York politician. Altogether, today's Times is a little library in itself, containing something that will please and interest everybody. young and old, male and female, simple and scholarly.

A Liar and a Hen. [Stockton Mail.]

When the champion lie is found it is well to pass it along. A Colorado newspaper genius has originated the latest triumph in this line. He tells in apparent good faith how a poultry breeder of that State had been discouraged by the tendency of hens to scratch. So he originated a breed of fowls by crossing Brahmas and bantams; the peculiarity of the cross being that one leg was bantam length while the other had the Brahma extension on it. Of se the result was that when the attempted to scratch it toppled it-over. After a few tumbles it became discouraged and gave up scratching. The person who originated this yarn may not be much of a poultry expert, but the Mail is willing to venture something that he will not be beaten as colossal prevaricator this season.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.] The story that Chile has sent four of her best warships down to prevent our wessels from passing through the Straits of Magellan simply creates a laugh. Why should they not pass around Cape Horn—only increasing their trip about between 200 and 300 miles? Chile has a right to block the Straits of Mahas a right to block the Straits of Magellan. She earned all that territory in her fight with Argentine in 1848, and expended a large amount of money in improving the straits. We do not recall that any newspaper save the Enquirer has remembered this fact. She can hold the straits, as she has a right to, but if any one is foolish enough to force us to fight with her, we can pass around the Horn and get there. Peru around the Horn and get there. Peru will give us a coaling station. That is all that is needed.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—[Copyright, 1892, by the New York Associated Press.] The committee to which was referred the Primary Education Bill submitted by the government in the Reichstag has during the past week, the first week of the sitting, dealt with thirteen clauses of that measure but reserved considera tion of the sections relating to questions of religion. These clauses, with the postponed sections which form the ker-nel of the measure, will be taken up next week, when it will be seen whether the government has the courage to defv the popular opposition, which is led by the most eminent men in Germany. The Liberal coalition appears to have gained an advantage in the committee by securing the passage of the proposal presented by Herr Rickert reaffirming the principle of state con-trol of schools.

Minister Zedlitz considered that the declaration did not affect the concession of the state in the direction of cleri-cal supervision, and offered no resist-ance to the amendment, which was only opposed by the Centrist or Church party. Herr Rickert next tried to get the committee to fix five hours weekly as the maximum time to be devoted to religious instruction. On this practical religious instruction. On this practical question the Conservatives are united to bring about a rejection. This is regarded as a bad omen for the success of any of the other proposed modifications of the religious clauses. The Clericals gave notice of several amendments giving the clergy even greater control than is provided for in the bill.

In the meanwhile protests against the measure are growing in number and importance. The municipal authorities of Berlin—95 to 14—adopted a petition to the Landtag against the bill and the burgomasters of Rhenish towns have decided to protest against it. A great congress of professors of Berlin, Halle. Bonn, Gottinger and other university towns has convened here to pass an appeal to the government to withdraw the measure. Public meetings have been held in every populous center of Prussia to protest against the bill and even Conservative districts are declaring in favor of modifications.

WRANGLING OVER THE KHEDIVE.

WRANGLING OVER THE KHEDIVE. The joint movement of the Dreibund's squadrons in the Levant are due to a diplomatic warfare over the Sultan's investiture of the Khedive. France and Russia are urging the Sultan to refuse investiture unless the Khedive proceeds to Constantinople, when, if he does go, all the squadrons of the guaranteeing powers will accompany him from Alexandria to the Dardanelles, thus giving a manifestation that Egypt is the vassal of the Porte and that England has no preponderance in Egypt. The Khedive is inclined to go to Constantinople, although his predecessors were invested at Cairo. The Khedive shows other symptoms of diplomatic warfare over the Sultan's his predecessors were invested at Cairo.

By Telegraph to The Times.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] The "sweating" system, so much in vogue in large cities, about which so much has been written by leading journals of the land, is to be thoroughly investigated by the Commit-tee on Manufactures of the House. Hon. Sherman Hoar, a young Demo-cratic Representative from Massachusetts, has beeen the chief agitator in the matter, and it is understood he will head the sub-committee which will be required to visit several of the leading cities of the country.

There is a great difference of opinion in the minds of members as to whether after all the abuses are unveiled Congress will have power . to abate the "sweating" system, as many abate the "sweating" system, as many hold that its regulation is only within the power of the legislatures of the respective States and entirely without the jurisdiction of the National Congress. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that the Committee on Manufactures will exercise to its fullest extent the authority to investigate today con-ferred upon it by the House to the end that whatever relief may be found necessary will come from the legislative powers having jurisdiction over the subject.

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.-[By the Asso ciated Press.]. House.—A resolution for an investigation of the so-called "sweating" system was adopted.

Several executive communications were laid before the House and appropriately referred.

The Speaker announced the appointment of the following committee to investigate the Pension Bureau: Messrs. Wheelock of Michigan, Little of New York, Dungan of Ohio, Lind of Minne-sota and Brosius of Pennsylvania. The House resumed consideration of the bill to promote the safety of na-tional banks.

Mr. Lockwood of New York objected to the bill because he believed it a det-riment to all banking interests and the general interests of the country to be constantly changing and modifying the law relating to national banks. He moved to refer the bill to the Committee on Judiclary. Lost—86 to 166,

On motion of Mr. Caminetti a joint resolution was passed requesting the Secretary of War to report what amount of money can be profitably expended in carrying out the recommendations of

The House then proceeded to the con-sideration of the House calendar, the first bill being that amending the inter-nal revenue law by abolishing the mini-mum sentences for violation thereof. UTAH'S PLEA.

An Argument for Home Rule in the Terri-

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] The Senate Committee other hearing to the delegation from Utah in favor of the Senate bill to give Utah the right of self-government.

C. C. Richards, a lawyer of Ogden, says that under the present system the Utah commission was not responsible to the people in any way. Richards ac-cused the commission of appointing per-sons of doubtful respectability as regis-ters and judges of elections, which re-sulted in the perpetration of the boldest

Continuing Richards said: "The condition of affairs is such as might have been expected from the hands of strangers. The commission from the very first time it came into Utah until now has never lost an opportunity to dehas never lost an opportunity to de-prive the people of their sacred rights and when protest was made they rushed before the people of the coun-try with some hideous nightmare to try with some hideous nightmare to arouse public prejudice against the people of the Territory."

At this point Senator Davis said: "Do you mean by that that Senators Ramsey and Paddock have been engaged in that sort of work?"

"We do, most decidedly," said Richards. Speaking upon the judicial system, he said that the people looked upon the courts as enemies rather than as friendly arbitrators. He denied that polygamy existed in the Territory and thought the people were as law-abiding as any in the country. They were entitled to local self-government like other States and Territories and all they asked was a trial. If they were they asked was a trial. If they were found incompetent, then Congress could again take the matter in hand.

F. C. Richards of Salt Lake City also addressed the committe in favor of the hill.

THE BLAINE DIVORCE. The Plaintiff will Have a Decree by De

Sioux Falls (S. D.,) Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] The famous divorce case of Blaine vs. Blaine is practically settled. The defense will not put in an appearance and a decree will be granted to Mrs. Blaine by default.

This afternoon Judge Palmer, attorney for Mrs. Blaine, received notice from McCarty, attorney for Blaine, on the order issued by Judge Thomas asking them to show cause why the answer of the defendant should not be stricken of the defendant should not be stricken out. "The defendant," so says the judge's order, "has disobeyed every order of the court and is now in contempt for having talled to pay suit fees and allmony." The order was returnable on the 10th, but the time will be extended to the 17th. The order also asks for an immediate trial. The attorneys for the defendant will not go to Deadwood and will put in no answer to the order. This simply means that the case will go by default, giving Mrs. Blaine a decree and probably the custody of the child. tody of the child.

English Salvationists Give Booth a Welcome.

The Army Turns Out in Force-Procession a Mile Long.

The Ovation at Times Almost Riotous in its Uproariousness.

Other Foreign News-A London Paper Thinks Minister Liucoln Should be the Republican Candidate for the Presidency.

By Telegraph to The Times.

London, Feb. 13.—[By Cable and Associated Press. | The Salvationists of London and in fact of all parts of the kingdom, took occasion today to show their love and loyalty to Gen. Booth, who has just arrived in England after a long visit to Australia and India. For several days past Salvationists have been pouring into London for the purpose of taking part in the procession to be given in his honor. There was an immense gathering in Hyde Park. Booth arrived at the marble arch at 3 o'clock and was the recipient of an ovation that became almost riotous in its demonstrativeness. Booth, accompanied by Mrs. Tucker, his daughter, and her husband, was in an open car-

The carriage was surrounded by a squad of mounted police and followed by a crowd of hooting and yelling hood-lums. The procession of Salvationists, which Booth reviewed, was a mile long and in it were cars emblematic of his travels in foreign lands. After the line had all passed in review Booth was driven back to the headquarters of the army. The whole route taken by his carriage was filled with enthusiastic

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S SON. A London Paper Booming Him for the Presidency.

London, Feb. 13 .- By Cable and Associated Press.] In the course of a long article the Spectator says that the retirement of Blaine from his position as a candidate for the nomination for President of the United States has brought the Presidency into special prominence. The Spectator thinks Blaine's friends in the Republican convention will not allow Mr. Harrison to be renominated. "The Republicans,", the Spectator says, "have the ideal dark horse in Robert Lincoln, the Amer-ican Minister to Great Britain, who would prove the most formidable candidate they could choose." It adds that this fact is already widely recognized. The Spectator deprecates the annovance Americans often show because of England's interest in the Presidency, and says that the English have no desire to interfere, but in the case of so near a relation they cannot help taking an interest. The Spectator con-

The Necessity for Pruning your Peach Trees More. [George Q. Dow in Our Country Home.] People who grow peach trees, as a rule, do not prune them or cut away the wood enough. In a majority of cases they allow them to grow up into tall, "straggly" trees. They generally consist of two or three bare limbs that run away up into the air, with little tufts of leafy branches on their ends. Such trees bear but little fruit, it is hard to get at, and their tall limbs are all the get at, and their tall limbs are all the time splitting away and falling to the ground with their weight. The Supposed Mokelumne Stage Robber in Custody.

-Once Respectable and Highly Prosperous-His Fall Due to Dissipation.

By Telegraph to The Times.
STOCKTON, Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press. | Constable Hawes of San Andreas today arrested here Felix Mc Clelland, who is supposed to be the man who on two occassions robbed the Mokelumne Hill and Valley Springs stage The man protests his innocence.

Hawes feels certain that he has ar rested the right man. The stage was first stopped on the 7th of January at a point about three miles from Moke-lumne Hill. The robber had a shotgun and was dressed in a long overcoat and striped pants. A week after Hawes and C. W. Getchell of San Andreas and a party of Stockton hunters ran across McClelland in the brush a few miles from the scene of the robbery. He had an old shotgun and said he was out quail an old shorgun and said he was out quail hunting, but he had no ammunition, and Hawes and Getchell took his gun and carried it home with them. As they had no evidence that McClelland was the highwayman San Andreas people made much sport of the detectives who arrested the gun and let the man go. > Beets for Cattle Feed. [Chino Champion.]

Sugar-beets are proving to be the best feed for cattle yet raised in this best feed for cattle yet raised in this section of country, and, as such, are paying better returns than any other farm product yet grown here. The past season the factory here was unable to use the beets from a few fields on account of their large size and low percentage of sugar. This, for a time, was thought by some to be almost an unqualified loss. Experience has proven such not to be the case. There has, since the factory closed, been a good demand and ready sale for all beets in the fields for cattle feed, and the have proven to be so valuable for that purpose that in the future the disposition of any beets that the factory—may not be able to use will be an easy matter, and at remunerative prices. There are and at remunerative prices. There are always some beets on the outside rows of fields, etc., which grow very large and are not suitable for working in the

CLEVELAND OR HILL?

The Question That is Now Rending the Democracy.

Ex-Senator Brown of Georgia Comes Out Squarely for David B .- Other Politicians in His State Favor Cleveland.

ATLANTA (Ga.,) Feb. 13.—[By the Associated Press.] Ex-Senator Joseph E. Brown favors Senator Hill of New York for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He has addressed a letter to the editor of the Constitution on the subject. He regrets the unfortunate division between Cleveland and Hill, and says that to make victory certain a united Democracy is necessary. The party should take the earliest steps possible to ascertain the sentiment of New York. Connecticut, New Jer sey and Indiana, which States Cleveland lost in 1888. Senator Brown says he does not remember a single case where the same person has been nominated by either of the great political parties to run three consecutive times for President, whether successful or unsuccessful, in the second election. If this has been Democratic usage, then the usage is unfavorable to the claims of ex-President Cleveland, and it would be more in conformity with the usage of the party to nominate Senator Hill or some other good man.

Brown mentions the long and valuable services of Senator Hill as Governor of New York to the Democracy; the recent fact that by a master stroke of policy he secured a Democratic ma-jority in the Legislature of New York and redeemed the State for the Democratic party for many years to come, and says: "It would seem that no other Democrat has done more for his party or more richly merited its honors and emoluments. Grover Cleveland being out of the way by unbroken usage of the party, Senator Hill, by his wis-dom in council and ability in execution, looms up head and shoulders above any other aspirant."

Brown thinks Hill's nomination will be followed by success at the ballot box, which will cause allabranches of the Federal Government to pass again under the control of the Democrats. He NEW YORK, Feb. 13,—The Richmond

Planting Deciduous Trees.
[Pomona Progress.]
January and February are the months for planting deciduous fruit trees in this region. Plant early and well. A few acres properly planted now will be worth many times what a large acre-age will be poorly planted late in the age will be poorly planted late in the season. Some growers advise the planting of two and three-year-old trees. This is generally claimed to be a mistake. While in a few instances trees of that age have been taken up and transplanted successfully by our more experienced horticulturists, the average grower and beginner will meet with much better success from planting one-year-old trees. There are thouaverage grower and beginner will meet with much better success from planting one-year-old trees. There are thousands of instances in this State where one-year-old trees, and even dormant buds, have outstripped in their growth trees transplanted when 2 and 8 years old. Dig large, deep holes; spend time and labor on your trees and future results from your orchard will more than repay you. Be careful and not plant too deep, as many trees are smothered and stunted by deep planting. Put plenty of good, rich soil in the bottom of each hole. Be sure that the roots have plenty of room and that they come well in contact with fine top soil, pressed firmly about them. Trees planted well and cared for are sure to live and thrive, and the owner is well off his way toward becoming a very successful and prosperous fruit-grower.

TACT IN SOCIETY.

True Manners "the Happy Ways of Doing Things."
The unwritten law of polite society demands that all business matters be laid aside at social gatherings. It is not a mark of good breeding to introduce one's own or other people's personal business affairs. Thoroughly well-bred people never do it. Not long ago, however, a lady who moves in the highest social circles of Los Angeles was guilty of committing this breach of etiquette. She didn't talk about her own business affairs. She has none to talk about except her club life, but addressing a guest across the table (it was at a luncheon) she began discussing in the most free and easy manner imaginable that quest's private manner imaginable that guest's private business affairs. She asked the most personal questions, expressed her in-nocent little opinious on matters of nocent little opinions on matters of which she knew nothing in a manner that was simply—well, convulsing to the guests. It reminded one of them strongly of an experience in a little Hoosier town of Indiana, where she was once teaching school. Whenever she appeared at any gathering and the honest folks began conversation with here the first sentence always was her, the first sentence always was "Well, how are you gittin' along teachin' school anyhow," till she began to feel as if the word "schoolma'am" was pla-as if the word "schoolma'am' was pla-carded all over her back.

Don't do this, ladies; it betrays vul-garity as nothing else can. It is like passing your business cards about among the company, or, as in the above case, forcing others to do so.

Emerson says "Manners are the happy ways of doing things." True po-liteness springs from a kind heart. A cultured gentleman once entertained at his table an old man. When the dinner was served the guest began eating with his knife, as he had learned to do seventy years ago, before forks were considered the necessary adjunct of table-ware that they are in modern times. The honest old farmer had clung to the habit of his boyhood. After swallowing a few mouthfuls, however, he observed that all the others were eating with their forks and he attempted to do the same in an awkward sort of a fashion.

The host, on the alert for his guest's comfort, noticed his clumsy efforts to adapt himself to the habits of the household, and quick as a flash dropped household, and quick as a flash dropped his fork, picked up his knife and began eating in the most hearty way, doing it all in a quiet, unobtrusive manner which at ouce set at ease his guest, who, with a sigh of relief, reverted to his life-long habit and enjoyed the dinner. His kind host understood thoroughly the ethics of true politeness, for after all "politeness of the mind is to have delicate thoughts."

The old saying, "When you are in Rome do as Romans do," is a platitude. Apropos of this comes a striking illustration. A fashionable lady was once invited to attend a small, informal tration. A fashionable lady was once invited to attend a small, informal luncheon. The other guests, a dozen in number, were gathered when the lady appeared, a trifle later than the hour set by the hostess. She entered the parlor in the glory of her new spring bonnet and light kids. None of the other guests wore their bonnets. Stripping from her right hand her glove, she offered the left hand, still gloved, to the guests as she was pregloved, to the guests as she was pre-sented. Through the long two hours absorbed in the discussion of the elab-orate menu the lady sat with her bonnet on, which rendered her conspicuo above all the other guests. She had probably read in some recent journal of etiquette that it was quite the thing to attend luncheons bonneted and halfgloved, also to extend the left hand in salutation. But her own innate good breeding should have told her that real politeness consists in the adapting one's self to the occasion and surroundings seif to the occasion and surroundings, and that what is appropriate at a swell New York gathering is utterly out of place when applied to an informal, quiet affair. One must always recognize the law of the "eternal fitness of things."

Boner, Alias Manheim

John Brennan, proprietor of the Hoffman House, No. 421 and 428 North Main street, writes to the editor of Tue Main street, writes to the editor of The Times, again protesting against the publicity given in these columns to the charges made by the drunken traveling man Boner, or "Manheim," reflecting upon the management of the hotel. It seems to be pretty evident that this eccentric individual made false charges when he alleged, as he did at the police station, that he had been overcharged at the house named. The Times published very briefly the simple fact of the man's original complaint. Manheim subsequently denied his statements, and swore to his denial in an affidavit written for him to sign. Mr. Brennan thinks that his good character and business standing should not be made to suffer by the false charges of irresponsible persons.

species of wasps are paper makers and will not hesitate to tear a piece of skin from a grape, thus admitting the bees, and unthinking persons seeing the bees at work jump to the conclusion that the bees are the original trespassers.

This matter of bees injuring raisin grapes to any extent is greatly overestimated. I have the proof of a San Diego county raisin maker, who also thinks that the matter is entirely overdrawn; in fact, there are several persons who combine the two businesses in one location, and they find that they do not conflict.

one location, and they find that they do not conflict.

If the raisin makers and bee-keepers who are diametrically opposed to each other's businesses would meet and talk the matter over in a friendly bearing the supposed injuries of the bees would dwindle into insignificance.

Of course, timid persons are continually afraid of being stung, where many bees are flying around; but if they will exercise a little caution and bravery, they will not get stung. Bees never attack anybody at a distance from their hives; it is only when a person is near the hives that they act vindictive and cross. Timid persons should always keep this in mind.

Terrible Butchery in Yemen.

[St. James's Gazette.]

The siege of the city of Sana, in Yemen, by the Arab insurgents began on the 14th day of July and ended on the 10th day of October, and more than 40,000 insurgents took part in it. While the besiegers kept up a continual bombardment a terrible famine prevailed. Every man who left the city vailed. Every man who left the city had his nose or ears cut off and was driven back to Sana naked as a hand. driven back to Sana naked as a hand. The Turkish garrison of the town behaved splendidly, for, though officers and men were half starved, they were on the walls day and night and kept the enemy under control. The chief of the insurgents was Mollah Salah Eddin, a native of the city of Saadah, who proclaimed all over the country that he would convert the 60,000 Jews of Yemen to Islam or would extirpate them. During the last days of the siege the insurgents had approached the city the insurgents had approached the city to within 1000 feet. On October 10 a Turkish army of relief appeared and soon got the mastery of the insurgents. On the following evening the Turkish commander, Achmed Feizi Pasha, entered the city in triumph, where he was welcomed as a saviour, especially by the Jews. No quarter was given to prisoners either by the Turks or by the insurgents, and so the battle was followed by a terrible butchery.

George Barnum tells a Colorado paper of his success in growing swine in Southern California: "I discovered two years ago," he explains, "the greatest secret in hog-feeding that I ever had. Signs of Prosperity Visible on Every Side.

The Real Estate Market Looking Up All Over the City.

A New Time Table on the Santa Fe Takes Effect Today.

Regular Weekly Meeting of the City Council-Amending the Liquor Ordinance-General Routine Busi-

[Branch office, No. 50 East Colorado street, where news, adver isements and orders for The Times are received.]

Never during the past few years has the real estate market looked so bright and has the mark of prosperity been so plainly discernible in Pasadean as now. Property has been changing hands rapidly of late and several choice residence sites and some acre property has been sold mostly to Eastacre property has been sold, mostly to East ern parties. The business outlook is very flattering and with encouraging reports from the country contiguous to Pasadena it is evident that this city has entered the new year with bright prospects for the fu-

The recent sales on Orange Grove avenue is what has caused the flutter in real estate circles—a sale on that noted boulevard al-ways does, for, to do it, is the height of the ambition of a Pasadena real estate dealer. Usually after a sale on this avenue the members of the firm making the same don't rustle for business for several days, for the commissions are usually large and they can well afford to stand in front of the

they can well afford to stand in front of the grate, and, with parted coat tails, talk it over and sell the same lot over and over again in their minds.

Of course the commission is what the real estate men are 'here for,'' but for the past few years they have had to bear prosperity or adversity with equal fortitude. A real estate man makes money one month and loses money the next. A man who cannot eatcaramels one month and cockle-burrs the next without a change of countenance is not fitted for the real estate business.

Still, with all the late flurry, there is no boom here, nor never will be, only that 'wolld, substantial, steady growth which builds up large cities.''

POMONA.

Another Sensation Growing Out of the Saloon Ordinance Trial.

Rumors of the Arrest of Witnesses for Perjury-Citizen Arrested for Visit-ing a Saloon-The Woody Matter.

[THE TIMES branch office for Pomona is in the real estate room of French & Lawrence, where news items, advertisements and subscriptions are received,]

Three more jurymen were secured in the case of the city vs. Green yesterday, making a total of ten secured so far.

The excitement created by the passage of the new ordinance was higher yesterday than ever before. It was rumored yesterday that a number of warrants were out for some prominent people, charging them with perjury in the recent case of the city against George R. Smith. THE TIMES rewith perjury in the recent case of the city against George R. Smith. THE TIMES reporter met a prominent anti-saloon man and asked him regarding the matter: "You may say authoritatively to THE TIMES," said the citizen, "that it is a fact that some prominent people in this case will undoubtedly be tried for perjury. I cannot give any names, but the information is authoritative." The City Attorney was hunted up and asked who they were. "Won't give any names," he said. "Jurors?" was asked "No." "Witnesses?" "Yes." "There were only two witnesses examined." suggested the reporter to which the attorney shrugged his shoulders.

To make matters more exciting Albert Colin, the junior member of the firm of Cohn Bros., one of the oldest firms in the city, was arrested upon a complaint sworn out by S. W. Thomas, charging him with visiting a saloon at Brown's Hotel. Heretofore it has been said that that part of the ordinance charging parties with misdemeanor for visiting would not be enforced, but it seems the anti-saloon men intend putting it to the test, and seem very confident they will win. The punishment in case of conviction is five days in jail and $100 fine. When the City Attorney was questioned on the subject he said: "We in case of conviction is five days in jail and $100 fine. When the City Attorney was questioned on the subject he said: "We intend carrying the cases right on, and have enough cases on hand and in prospect to last a year. The case of Mr. Cohn will to last a year. The case of Mr. Cohn will come up as soon as the other cases ahead of it are disposed of. We have detectives in the city, and when a man is taking a drink he had better be sure of his man, for we will have many more arrests." Of course, whether that part of the ordinance relating to the visiting of a saloon is valid or not, it does not make it any the less unpleasant to be hauled up before the court and sentenced and put to the expense of carrying it to a higher court to find out. The citizens are very much excited over the matter and were talking in groups over the city in an animated manner all day.

The Woody matters till attracts much at-

THE WOODY MATTER.

The Woody matter still attracts much attention. Cyrus Burdick, who was Woody's opponent at the last election, said to The Times reporter yesterday: "You were mistaken in saying that Woody was elected to his seat by I vote. When the votes were counted Woody had 57 votes and I 58. One of my votes was decided illegal and the vote was declared a tie. This being the case Woody held office by preemption only." At the previous election Woody received I 20 majority. The case will undoubtedly be brought to trial and a thorough investigation made.

John Seamons and Fred L. Gardner, to use a familiar expression, have "left for parts unknown." They went out duck use a familiar expression, have "left for parts unknown." They went out duck hunting last Sunday on the Chino ranch and when one of the cowboys expostulated with them refused to stop. The cowboys, aided by a constable, gave chase and the boys succeeded in evading arrest. Yesterday the matter grew too warm for the boys, and finding they could be fined $300 they thought best to vacate. Seamons has a family and has been a painter in this city for many years. Gardner was the manager of Brown's Hotel.

Unfair Reports About the Orange Crop.

A Circular Which Does an Injustice to This Section.

Fifth Monthly Meeting of the County Teachers' Institute.

Session of the Citrus Fair Committee Preparations for the Exhibit—The Ansheim and Tustin Budgets-General News

[Branch office at Briggs' news stand, cor-ner Fourth and West streets, where sub-scriptions and advertisements are taken.] A circular letter from a Chicago fruit firm was shown THE TIMES correspondent yester-day, in which it is stated they are receiving a few inquiries for California oranges on ac-count of the low prices at which they are being offered, and stating that any desired brand can be shipped, at owner's risk as to quality of fruit, on the grounds that many groves have been injured, and the growers are anxious to move fruit at any price. The circular then goes on to boom Florida fruit at the expense of the California The bulk of the Orange county orange crop is of excellent quality, and has not been injured, either by windstorms or frosts, and if the growers here are ready to improve an opportunity to earn an honest reputation for their fruit, they will begin reputation for their fruit, they will begin this year shipping it to market over their own brands, giving the locality in which, and by whom, it was grown. The ctrculation of such printed matter asquoted above is unfair and does the vicinities represented a great injustice, which will, no doubt, be remembered by the fruit-growers when the time comes for them to dispose of their crops. their crops.

COUNTY TEACHERS' MEETING The fifth monthly meeting of the school seachers of Orange county convened at the High school building in this city yesterday at 10 o'clock, Prof. Carpenter in the chair. Miss McPherson, of the Tustin school, read a paper on "The Teachers' Work," showing that the same should begin long before breakfast and not close until late at night, but should not interfere with one's night, but should not interfere with one's rest.

Prof. F. E. Little of Anaheim gave his method of starting classes in the different subjects in arithmetic. The professor is a plain, practical man and does not believe in spending too much time with those things which are of no use after the pupil leaves school; neither does he believe in presenting subjects in such a way in the primary grades that they will have to be learned over again in the higher grades.

Prof. Edwin A. Cox of Boston gave a very interesting talk on the subject of "Music in our Public Schools," during which he advocated the method presented in the Normal music chart. The main object set forth in the talk was to teach the pupils to sing and to read music at sight; to teach them to think; to appeal to their reason in this as in other things, for the teacher does not solve the problems of an arithmetic lesson on the board and ask the pupils to copy them. Therefore, the teacher should not sing the exercise and then ask the class to copy it. The subject was treated in an able and interesting manner, and when concluded the professor was tendered a vote of thanks by the teachers, after which the meeting adjourned.

"Yes," said one of the young officers.

In the city of Zurich, Switzerland, on the 20th of April every year, the citizens celebrate the coming of spring by ringing all the bells in the city at 8 o'clock, morning and evening. Sechselanten means in English ringing the bells at 6 o'clock.

On this day only the better classes take part in the celebration. There is a grand procession. The streets are crowded with people all day. Just before the procession begins officers appear on horseback and ride through the streets, separating the people to the right and left to make room for those taking part in the parade (this year, for the arrangement is varied each year.) First a man and child come, representing William Tell and his little boy, the latter carrying the apple with an arrow through it in his hand.

The duke and commanders and nobles were all dressed in velvet, and others in silk, with iron or steel armors.

Then came ladies and gentlemen on horseback, all dressed in the costume of that time. Los Arghles (Cal.,) Feb. 4, 1892.

Dear Mrs. Otts: I have written you two letters before, and thought I would like to write again. I have been going to school for the last year and a half. I am in the B class. I have a little brother that just started to school a month ago, or after Xmas vacation. My Aunt Ada and Uncle Frank were here visiting us a week, and she liked Los Angeles very much, but the rain made the streets so muddy Los Angeles did not look as well as it would any other time. The frost had frozen all our tilles, and none of our roses are out at all, but I expect after this rain we will have plenty of flowers and everything will be the better for the week's rain. This will be all this time. Your friend, Gordon F. Gillespir.

[Forest and Stream.]
How many of us can remember our first shot at game? I was slightly built and ten or eleven years of age when I discovered that a flock of woodducks [Forest and Stream.] frequented the creek. I resurrected the old family flintlock musket, which family tradition said had seen service in the War of the Revolution, and has been used in the War of 1812 in the en deavor to repel the British, when Buffalo was burned. The flint was gone. I searched the field where I had seen flint Indian arrow heads, and found one out of which I manufactured a passable flint for the old gun. I obtained some blasting powder from a neighbor and crushed it fine. For shot I cut some pieces of lead to a suitable size; wadded the powder and shot firmly with tow. Proceeded to the creek crawling through the short brush as only a boy or rabbit can do, trailing the old musket, which was so heavy I could barely with the exercise of much will power bring to my shoulder. Arriving near the point where I believed the ducks were located, I carefully raised my head above the brush. The ducks rose. I brought the old gun to my shoulder and pulled the trigger. The old musket went off and so did I—head over heels, seeing stars the names of which I never knew. I picked myself up with a bruised shoulder and a bloody nose, and the old musket, good for further service, and— five ducks! Stars, bruises and bloody nose were forgotten. Gloryl I guess I-huzzaed. And was I not the hunter of hunters among my mates of whom there were manyl Over a half century has passed since I made that shot, to me then a famous one. Yes, but where are those mates? Of them all I almost alone remain.

Following the boys every hot summer afternoon to this famous bathing spot was a big brindle buildog, owned by the late William H. Gray, bearing the euphonious name of Bluch. Old Bluch seemed to relish the sport as much as the boys. He would, in turn with the rest, seize the rope in his teeth, make a short run down the slope toward the edge of the bank, swing out over the edge of the water and drop off, just as the boys did, with a big splash into the stream below. Swimming back he the boys did. with a big splash into the stream below. Swimming back he would await his turn with eagerness, and no one dared to cheat him out of his place in the line; if they attempted it his flerce growls and display of teeth showed his readiness to fight for his rights. Poor Bluch! Like his owner and many of those who used to take the afternoon plunges with him, he is now resting peacefully under the sod.

By this time the hunters had crossed the fence, and the dogs, with the exception of Jonah, were beginning to cast about in the broomsedge and brier

"I hope Jonah isn't lazy," said Miss Carter, watching the dog as he walked in quiet dignity by the side of her horse. "Oh, no," said Joe, "he isn't lazy, but he never gets in a hurry until the time

watch for Jonah!"

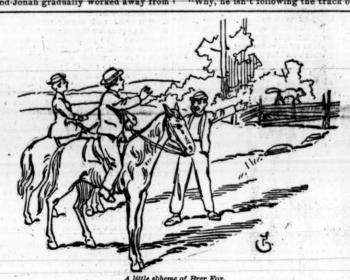

Presently the hounds could be heard again, coming nearer and nearer. Then a larger and darker shadow sprang out of the woods and swept across the pasture, running swiftly and yet with the regularity of machinery. At short intervals a little puff of vapor would rise from this black shadow, and then the clear voice of longh would then the clear voice of longh would would rise from this black snadow, and then the clear voice of Jonah would come ringing over the valley. Then the rest of the dogs, a group of shadows, with musical notes, swept across the Bermuda field. "Oh, how beautiful!" exclaimed Miss

"Oh, how beautiful!" exclaimed Miss Carter, clapping her little hands.
"Wait," said Joe, "don't make any noise. He'll pass here and go to the fence yonder, and if he isn't scared to death you'll see a pretty trick."

It was a wide circle the fox made after he passed through the Bermuda field. He crossed the little stream that ran through the valley, skirted a pine thicket, ran for a quarter of a mile along a plantation path, and then turned and came down the fallow ground that lay between the creek and the hill where Joe and Miss Carter, with Harbert, had taken their stand. It was a comparatively level stretch of It was a comparatively level stretch of nearly half a mile. The old corn rows ran lengthwise the field, and down one of these Old Sandy came in full view of those who were waiting to see him pass. He was running rapidly, but not at full speed, and, although his tongue was hanging out, he was not distressed. Reaching the fence 200 yards, away from the spectators, he clambered lightly to the top, sat down on a rail and began to lick his fore paws, stopping eccasionally, with one paw sus-pended in the air, to listen to the dogs. In a moment or two more Jonah en-tered the field at the head of the yalley, Old Sandy, carefully balancing him-self on the top rail of the fence, walked it for a hundred yards or more, then gathering himself together sprang into the air and fell into the broomsedge fully twenty feet away from the fence.

"Oh, I hope the dogs won't catch him!" exclaimed Miss Carter. "He surely deserves to escape!"
"He got sense like folks," said Har-

"He stayed on the fence too long, Just look at Jonah!" cried Joe. The hound came down the field like a whirlwind. He was running at least thirty yards to the left of the furrow the fox had followed. "Why, he isn't following the track of

He swept the field in ever-widening circles, going in an easy gallop that was the perfection of grace and energy and strength. Presently Harbert cried out: "Looky yonder, Marse Joe! Looky yonder at Jonah!"

All eyes were turned in the direction that Harbert pointed. The dog was hunting where the broomsedge was higher than his head, and he had evidently discovered something, for he would leap into the air, look around and drop into the sedge, only to go through the same performance with increasing

"He's no tattler," said Joe, "and he doesn't need any help. That fox has doesn't need any help. That fox has doesn't need any help. That fox has either just got up, or he isn't twenty yards away, Just wait."

The next moment Jonah gave tongue with thrilling energy, repeated the challenge twice, and was off, topping the fence like a bird. The effect on the other dogs was magical. They rushed to the cry, caught up the red-hot drag, scrambled over the fence the best they could, and went away, followed by a cheer from Harbert that shook the dew from the leaves. The young men were off, too, and Joe had all he could do to hold his horse, which was in the habit of running with the hounds. The sound of the hunt grew fainter as the dogs ran across a stretch of meadow land and through a skirt of woods to the open country beyond, and Joe and Miss Carter, accompanied by Harbert, proceeded leisurely to the brow of a hill near by.

"If that is Old Sandy," said Joe, "he will come across the Bermuda field younder, turn to the left and pass us not very far from the dead pine yonder." Joe was very proud of his knowledge.

"Why, we shall see the best part of the hunt," cried Miss Carter enthusiastically.

They sat on their horses and listened They sat on their horses and listened. Sometimes the hounds seemed to be coming nearer, and then they would veer away. Finally their musical voices meited away in the distance. Joe kept his eye on the Bermuda field, and so did Harbert, while Miss Carter tapped her horse's mane gently with her riding-whip and seemed to be enjoying the scene. They waited a long

He topped the fence some distance above the point where the fox had left it, lost the trail, and made a sweeping circle to the right, increasing his speed as he did so. Still at fault he his speed as he did so. Still at fault he circled widely to the left, picked up the drag a quarter of a mile from the fence and pushed on more eagerly than ever. The rest of the dogs had overrun the track at the point where the fox had turned to enter the field, but they finally found it again and went by the spectators in fine style, running together very prettily. At the fence they lost the trail and for some minutes they were casting about. One of the younger were casting about. One of the your dogs wanted to take the back track, Harbert turned him around and wa about to set the pack right, when the voice of Jonah was heard again clear and ringing. Old Sandy, find-ing bimself hard pushed, had dropped flat in the grass and allowed the hound to overrun him. Then he doubled and started back. He gained but little, bu he was still game. Jonah whirled in a short circle and was after the fox al short circle and was after the fox al-most instantly. Old Sandy seemed to know that this was his last opportunity. With a marvelous burst of speed he plunged through the belated dogs that were hunting for the lost drag, slipped through the fence and went back by the spectators like a flash. There was a remendous outburst of music from the dogs as they sighted him, and for one brief moment Joe was afraid that Jonah would be thrown out. The next instant would be thrown out. The next instant the dog appeared on the fence, and then he sighted the fox. It was then that the courage and speed of Jonah showed themselves. Nothing could have stood up before him. Within a hundred yards he ran into the fox. Realizing his fate, Old Sandy leaped into the air with a loud squall, and the next moment the powerful jaws of Jonah had closed on him.

By this time the rest of the hunters had come in sight. From a distance they witnessed the catch. They saw the rush that Jonah made; they saw the rush that Jonah made; they saw Miss Carter and Joe Maxwell galloping forward; they saw the lad leap from his horse and bend over the fox, around which the dogs were jumping and howing; they saw him rise, with hat in hand, and present something to his fair companion, and they knew that the young lady would ride home with Old Sandy's brush suspended from her saddle.

These hunters came up after awhile.

Their horses were jaded, and the riders themselves looked unhappy.

"Did you notice which one of my dogs caught the fox?" asked the young man to whom the pack belonged.

"No at a did not?" asked Inc.

The main trouble is that they live in such an out-of-the-way place. The house is a mile from the public road and hard to find."

"I hear," said Joe, "that the provost marshal had something to do with hold-ing back supplies that ought to have gone to Mr. Pruitt's family."
"How could he?" asked the editor,

"How could ne?" asked the editor, and then he added quickly: "Why, of course he could; he is in charge of everything. He is judge, jury, lawyer and general director. Who told you about it?" 'I heard it in town," said Joe.

Frank M. Ochoa arrived recently in Perris after a trip on foot from El Paso, straight across the Sierras. Besides a straight-away trip of 1000 miles he has made prospecting tours off from the track a number of times. He was accompanied only by a burro. He claims to have located a mine in Sonora, which he estimates as worth half a million. It is in a mining region, close to where Los Angeles parties are at work. He says there are in sight 1000 tons of ore, which will go 100 ounces to the ton. It is, however, 140 miles from transportation facilities and the ore has to be lixiviated. —[Perris New Statesmen Who Have Pined in Confederate Prisons.

Thrilling Experiences of a Dozen Members of Congress.

Fighting Starvation and Chased by Fierce Bloodhounds.

forty Days Under the Shells of Confed erate Guns—Escaped by Personat-ing a Dead Man—North With Jeff Davis,

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10,1892 .- [Special Correspondence.] Congressmen in prison? Yes, and the best members of Congress too. A baker's dozen of them have spent weary months in prisons, watched by guards ready to shoot them at their slightest attempt to escape. Some for such attempts have gone about their prison pens with loads of iron tied to their ankles and others been followed by bloodhounds and recaptured. These statesmen, who now feed on the fat of Washington, then grew thin on prison fare and their ones stuck out as they grabbed for their rations in all the different military prisons of the North and South during the last war. They were all brave soldiers and they are all today patriotic American citizens. Not one of them bears any ill-will towards the section of the United States where he spent those gloomy prison days, and both Union and Confederates among them find excuses for the poor food and bad treatment which they then received. The stories of these experiences read like a romance. Take that of the Speaker. The Honorable Charles Frederick Crisp was plain Charlie Crisp in 1861. He was a beardless boy of sixteen when he entered the Confederate army, but they made him lieutenant and ne led Co. K of the Tenth Virginia Infantry. He had served three years when he was wounded and captured and carried to Fort Delaware, and for three nonths he lay there with thousands of other Confederate prisoners, having no comfort, but no great privations. Then an order was issued that in retaliation for the acts of the Confederates 600 officers among the prisoners of this fort should be sent south and placed under the fire of the Confederate guns at Morris Island, near Charleston. This order was not known to the prisoners, and when the future Speaker was selected with the others and told to get ready to go southward he supposed he was going to be exchanged and his heart was glad. The 600 were packed away between the decks of the little steamer Crescent. Bunks had been knocked up for them and these ran in tiers the whole length of the vessel. Each bunk held from three to four persons and down there under the decks it was terribly hot. The trip was taken during the worst part of the dog days. It lasted for more than two weeks and during the latter part of the voyage water beselected with the others and told the latter part of the voyage water be-came scarce and the salt water was condensed and given to the prisoners boiling hot. They would often put it boiling hot. They would often put it into bottles and hang these by strings out into the ocean to cool. At last the ship arrived at Morris Island and the Speaker and his fellow-officers found themselves put in a stockade on the sands. This stockade was square, and it inclosed about an acre. It was midway between the Confederate batteries Gregg and Wagner, and in front of the Federal batteries, and so located as to Federal batteries, and so located as to be in the direct range of the Confeder-ate guns. These guns were mortars and they threw great shells which went shricking over the prison pen, and now and then exploded in the air and fragments fell in the stockade, to the horror of the prisoners. Strange to say, however, no one was hurt. Representative Cobb was in this prison at the same time with Speaker it the same time with Speaker He had been taken prisoner at Crisp. He had been taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg, had spent six months in the prison on Johnson's Island, had been carried from there to Fort Delaware, and now with these other officers he was in the stockade under the Confederate fire. He and the Speaker had practically the same ex-periences, and they remained together until they were carried back to Fort Delaware. Their guards on Morris Island were negroes, "and these," says Mr. Cobb, "were the blackest negroes you ever saw. These were exposed as much to the fire as we were, and one of them had his leg knocked off by a shell."

"What sort of accommodations had von?" I asked. "Not very good," was the reply.
"The camp was laid off in streets and we had little A tents and there were four men in a tent. A negro sergeant had charge of each row of tents, and it was his duty to call the call three times was his duty to call the call three times a day and to issue rations. Around the tents and inside the stockade there was a line tied to posts which we knew was dead-line, and the man who passed this rope or even touched it knew he would

"What were your rations?"
"They were not very fattening," was the reply. "They consisted of hardtack and mush or rice. In the morning we got from three to five pieces of hard tack and a piece of meat about an inch wide and two inches long. At noon each of us got about half a pint of pea soup which was brought around in a soup which was brought around in a barrel and ladled out, and for supper we had a little mush or rice, which was also served from a barrel. At first the feeding was not so bad, but later on when the principle of retaliation was carried out they cut us down to a pint of meal and a half pint of pickle per day. This was terrible, and it was done in retaliation, so they claim, for the treatment of the prisoners at Ander-sonville. Many of the prisoners then got the scurvey and we all became emaciated. We were under fire at Morris Island for more than forty days were then carried to Fort Pulaski, at the close of the war taken back to Fort Delaware and released.'

Fort Delaware and released."

Perhaps the most distinguished prisoner among the members of the House was Gen. Joe Wheeler, the famous Confederate cavalry officer. Gen. Wheeler was a graduate at West Point, and he entered the Confederate army as a lieutenant at the age of 25. He was promoted again and again, and upon the death of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart he became the senior cavalry officer of the Confederate army. He was, in fact, the Phil Sheridan of the South, and at the close of the war, when Jefferson Davis and his Cabinet had fled from Richmond to Charlotte, N. C., Davis looked upon Gen. Wheeler as his chief support in his projected flight through the South.

He wanted Gen. Wheeler to take his entire command along with him, but Gen.
Wheeler told him that was impossible, and that the best means would be for him to divide his best men into a number of small bands, and that these could ber of small bands, and that these could follow him, and by the ease with which they could be managed, could be moved from place to place to protect and aid him. This was agreed to, and Gen. Wheeler was dashing along in the rear of Jefferson Davis when he was captured. He had not yet reached Davis when he received orders to disband his troops. He had done this and had only a few of his soldiers about him when he was captured. He told me the other he was captured. He told me the other night the circumstances of his capture.

"I was lying in the woods in company with several of my soldiers and a couple of negroes when a party of Union soldiers came up. These soldiers were in Confederate clothes, and they found us by the aid of a negro who had brought us something to eat. They were headed by a Lieut. Reynolds, and as soon as I saw him come up and talk as soon as I saw him come up and talk to my negroes, I knew it was all up with me, and that they had found out who I was. I had torn the stars, which denoted my rank, off of my coat, but the coat was faded and the spots shone out so that they could tell that I was an officer. Upon being accosted and asked who I was, I told them that I was Gen. Wheeler, and that under the cartel then in force I surrendered and asked that we be parolled. Lieut. Rey-nolds told me that he would not accept my parol at that time, and said, 'You wanted to be with Davis and we will take you to him.' With that he took me with him to Atlanta, and I was there put in company with Jefferson Davis, Alexander Stephens, Clement C. Clay and ex-Senator Reagan upon a little boat and taken in this down to Savan-nah where he got another boat which carried us north. The boat that took us north was guarded by the gunboat Matamoras. The families of Davis and Clay were taken north with us, and Mrs. Davis had little Winnie Davis with her. She was then a baby and I had her on my knee during a great part of the voy-age, and helped to take care of her as the nurse had been taken away from Mrs. Davis.

"I roomed with Alexander Stephens "I roomed with Alexander Stephens on the steamboat," continued Gen. Wheeler, "and I found him very gloomy over the prospects. As for me I felt happy and I thought it was a grand thing that I had not been taken prisoner before and felt relieved that the war was over. One day I said to Mr. Stephens in a joking way that I had Stephens in a joking way that I had been accustomed to going north every summer for my health and that the Fed-eral Government was very kind in the present instance when I had no money to take me there and pay my expenses for me. He rebuked me and said I ought not to trifle with such a serious matter, and he told me that for himself matter, and he told me that for himself he expected a long if not a perpetual imprisonment. I told him there was no danger of his being ill-treated, that he had numerous friends among the public men of the north and that they would not harm him whatever they did with the rest of us, on the account of the speech he had made for the Union before the war began. He would not believe me, however, and said that he extended. lieve me, however, and said that he exneve me, however, and said that he expected nothing but punishment. I then asked: 'Well, Mr. Stephens, if this is to be your fate, what will be the fate of President Davis?' A look of horror came over his face and he raised his hands. 'Don't speak of it,' he said. 'His fate is too terrible to think of.' 'Mr. Reagan took the situation more

"Mr. Reagan took the situation more calmly and he evidently did not greatly fear the results. We went together on this boat north until we reached Fort-ress Monroe, where the party was divided. Jefferson Davis was taken off under a guard, Reagan and Stephens were sent to Fort Warren and I was put on another boat and carried to Fort Delaware. I was kept there for a month in one of the large rooms of the fort, and during this time I had a guard of an officer, three corporals and twenty-six soldiers. Soldiers with guns cocked soldiers. Soldiers with guns cocked stood at the door during the whole time and kept their eyes on me. They even watched me when I took my bath and their espionage was by no means pleasant. I did not grow fat on my diet. My breakfast was a piece of meat and a piece of bread served on a tin plate, which was none too clean sometimes. which was none too clean sometimes. For dinner I got a tin cup of soup with a little piece of meat floating in it, and for supper I had a piece of bread. I had nothing in the shape of tea and coffee to drink, and I was watched very comee to drink, and I was watched very closely. I slept on the floor, and was not allowed to read, write or speak to any one. Still on the whole I was happy, and when one day I was led out to Gen. Shoeph and dismissed without much ceremony the thing seemed to come as a matter of course and I was happy in the war, being over and myhappy in the war being over and myself still alive.

A number of the Northern Congress-men who served in the Union army dur-ing the war underwent all the horrors of the prison life of the South and their stories of Libby and Andersonville, and the other Southern prisons are thrilling in the extreme. Two of the strangest in the extreme. Two of the strangest experiences are those of Representative John C. Tarsney of Missouri and Representative Irvine Dungan of Ohio. Both were imprisoned for months and the capture and escape of each has the capture and escape of each has the variety and adventure of a detective novel. Representative Tarsney went into the army at 17. He enlisted in the Fourth Michigan Infantry and then served in the Fifth Army Corps. He was severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, was carried off the field by the Confederates and taken south to Richmond. Here he was kept for a time at Belle Island, there was kept for a time at Belle Island. Here he was kept for a time at Belle Island. at Belle Island, therete moved to Ander-sonville, and, finally, in 1864, was taken to Milan, from whence he escaped. White he was in Andersonville his prison was located within eight miles of the home of Speaker Crisp, and during the past summer Mr. Crisp told an audience at Kansas City that Tars-ney was a constituent of his and that he has spent one summer at a famous re-sort within eight miles of his home. sort within eight miles of his home. Tarsney opposed the bill which was introduced into the Fifty-first Congress to give $2 a day to all surviving soldiers who had been in Southern prisons for the length of time they were in such prisons. Speaker Crisp referred to this bill and to Tarsney's action, and said that Tarsney had told him that though there was $1100 in the bill for him, he could not support it for the United could not support it for the United States Government had already paid him 88% cents a day for the grub which he had received in that prison in the shape of commutation of rations and he really thought this was more than the food was worth.

I talked with Representative Tarsney last night about his prison experiences.

Prison life is bad in any shape and The Southern prisons were terrible. The South was very poor itself and its soldiers on the field were almost starving. The rations we received were miserably small and of the poorest quality, and at Belle Island, Andersonville and Milan we had mighty poor fare. It was terribly cold at Belle Island during the winter of 1881 and I was one of the first of the men sent from there to Andersonville and was in Andersonville when the stockade was first opened. The stockade was built midst of a forest and at first we had plenty of fuel to cook our corn-meal and after this had gone we had a bakery which served out our mush and molasses. Throughout my prison life I managed to get enough to keep me alive and during the latter part of it I succeeded in getting a number of extra rations. In the first place let me tell you how our prison organization orig-inated. While I was in Andersonville there was a large gang of robbers among the prisoners, who made a pracamong the prisoners, who made a practise of falling upon and robbing the aew men as they came in. They were a set of thugs made of bounty jumpers and stragglers and had been captured along with our soldiers. They had an organized band in the prison and they tommitted murder as well as robbery. At last a vigilance committee was formed, and, with the consent of Wirz, the corresponder of the prison this corp. the commander of the prison, this com-mittee arrested the leaders of the gang, held a court and tried them. The re-sult was that they hung six of them in he prison with the consent of the rebel authorities, and after this we had a reg-ular police organization inside the prison, and this afterward was extended to the other prisons, the prisoners be-ing divided up into hundreds, and the orisoner who was appointed having charge over each hundred and bringing ing them forth to roll call, and being to a certain extent responsible for them. Every now and then we would have Every now and then we would have new batches of men come into the prison and new hundreds would be formed. During the latter part of my prison career I got in the habit of get-ting near the gate when these new companies came in, and as they marched up I would fall into line and give a fictitious name and thus become registered with them. Then, when that 100 was ap for roll call and distribution of rations I would appear and answer ns I would appear and answer this name and get my ration another hundred I answered as John Tarsney and got a ration there and I continued this until at last I was and I continued this until at last I was drawing five different rations, which in addition to my own was six, and I not only kept myself, but a poor fellow soldier who was too sick to play the same game. I was one of the first men in Andersonville and Milan, and I saw that these companies in which I registered were far enough aparts. that these companies in which I registered were far enough apart so that I could skip from one to the other and answer my name in all. I began to fatten up and was doing splendidly when a number of the other prisoners got to playing the same game and the authorities discovered us. One morning after I had been called in No. 500 no order came to disband, and I could be treat any other companies. That not get to my other companies. That day it was discovered that 600 men were absent and that 600 more rations were issued than there were men. officers of the prison thensaid that they would not issue more rations until these 600 men were accounted for. There were 85,000 men in the prison and I was not going to let these thousands of men starve for me, so I told the officers how I had been cheating them. The result was that they took me to a blacksmith's shop and fastened thirty-two pounds of iron to my leg by wav of punishment. I lugged this around for awhile, and then lugged this around for awhile, and then one of the officials, seeing that I was but a boy, asked me what was the matter. I told him and asked him to have it taken off, saying that I would not cheat them again if they would remove the iron. This was done, but I couldn't keep my promise. My stomach was stronger than my conscience, and I was according three or four rations unsoon drawing three or four rations un-der different names. Well, they caught me again, and they now put thirty-two pounds of iron on each leg. I dragged this around for some time, but at last a Massachusetts man, who had a file, cut the chain so that I could take the balls off and fixed them in such a way that I could fasten them on with a string when I had to go to roll call. The result was that I got around very nicely, and the authorities never suspected that I was not dragging this load of iron all the

"What was the story of your escape, Mr. Tarsney?" I asked.

"It was a curious one," replied the Con-gressman. "According to the records of that prison I am numbered with the lead and the United States Government which has erected headstones over the graves of the prisoners who died during the war, has probably put up one with my name on it in the cemetery outside the prison of Milan. The way it came were to be exchanged and according to the principle followed by the southerners, the poorest, the diseased, the lame, the halt, and the blind were picked out for exchange. I was too fat to get for exchange. I was too fat to get among that number and I had no idea that I would be taken. The night before the exchange was to be made in walking down the hill, which was on one side of the prison, I heard a voice. It was about dusk. I looked and on the ground was an emaciated soldier who had attempted to drag himself across the stockade, but had fallen and was helpless. I lifted him up, gave him something to drink and made him as comfortable as I could. I talked with him and he told me the company that he belonged to and all about self. He told me he was to be exchanged on the morrow but with his consumptive cough. I could see that he would never get to the North. He gave me the number of the company he was in in the prison and the name of ais sergeant and after doing what I could for him, I left him. Early the next morning in crossing the camp I more than a dead skeleton. As I walked away from him the thought came to me that I might get out of prison in his place and I at once went to one of my friends and told him my scheme. I wrote out my own name, my regiment and my company on a piece of paper and pinned it on his coat. Then my friend, Johnny Campion, and myseif lifted him up and carried him and placed him among the dead bodies at the side of the gate of the prison. This was the custom and the bodies were regularly carried out the bodies were regularly carried out buried and the names were recorded among of the prison. I then the sergeant of my and buried and went to the sergeant of my own prison company and arranged to have him report me dead. He agreed to do so, and I went to the sergeant of the company to which the dead man longed and tried to get him to let me passout in this man's place. He at first refused and wanted to put in one of his own friends, but I told him that the scheme was mine and that I would expose any one else who tried to be ex-changed under it. He was ugly and would not consent to it, and I was in despair until at last I thought of an old silver watch which I had with me.
was the only thing of value I had sa and it was worth perhaps $10. I pulled this out and offered him the watch, this out and offered him the watch, saying: 'I will give you this watch on this condition: if I get out of the prison you may keep it, but if I don't you must give it back to me.' He grumbled a little, but took the watch, and I was now ready for the exchange. I made myself look, if anything, more ragged than ever; I drew in my shoulders, affected an extravagant limp and succeeded in passing the officers and getting out where we were put to wait for the train. The train did not come in on time and I had to pass another trains and this limb. shoulders, limp and the officers other examination, and this time I came near being caught. I had gotten past the officer and was in the gate just ready to go out when the inspecting officer called 'halt.' I halted, for a move I knew would result in my death. The sergeant, however, who had my watch in his pocket, spoke a word to the man telling him it was all right, and I was permitted to go on. My name was now John Franz, of Co. K of the was now John Franz, of Co. K of the Fifty-fourth Pennsylvania Regiment, and I had to answer to this and to where I was captured before they would let me through. At the Detroit reunion last summer a man rushed up to me and pretended that he was going to fight me, saying that he had a little matter to settle with me. I was just getting saying that he had a little matter to settle with me. I was just getting ready to defend myself and I noted the twinkle in his eye, and I found it was my old friend Johnnie Campion, who had helped me to carry the dead body to the gate, and who, after the war, had gone to Iowa to live."

representative Dungan of Ohio had several most remarkable escapes during his career in the military prisons of the Southwest. He went into the war in the Nineteenth Iowa Infantry, was captured at the battle of Morganza, near Baton Rouge, and he was confined at arst in the prison near Tyler, Tex. The stockade about this prison was made of huge square posts set about six feet deep in the earth, one close to another. forming a wall or fence around the in-closure. Some of these posts were very arge, and acurst there was no guard nside of the inclosure and no guards on inside of the inclosure and no guards on op, as there were later on. Mr. Dungan and two of his companions concocted a plan of escape. They dug the earth out from one of the larger posts so that they could pull its bottom inward without disturbing the wall and could move it back and forth. They then watched the guard and when he could move it back and forth. They then watched the guard and when he had turned on his way past this spot the three of them slipped out and rushed for the woods. They got into the inderbrush and safely away without discovery that night. When it was discovered that they had gone, the country was scoured for them and some days later they heard the baying of the hounds who were on their track. They were at this time near a river and they jumped into this and swam several miles down it to an island which was covered with bushes. island which was covered with husbes They crawled panting in among these and lay there while the hounds beat up and down the banks, but failed to locate gone away they crawled out and made their way north, following the north star, an at last getting into the Indian star, an 'at last getting into the indian ferritory. They were thinly clad and it was very cold. One night a northwester, or a cold blizzard, came up and they thought they would perish. The cold rain beat down upon them, but they saw in the distance a spark, and they thought this might be a camp of indians. They hurried forward to it and found it was a burning stump from and found it was a burning stump from a clearing which had been burned over by the Indians. Dungan whipped off his coat and shielded the blaze from the as coat and shielded the blaze from the rain and the other two gathered logs of wood and they soon had a big fire, which warmed them and about which they lay all that night. "The next day," said Mr. Dungan. "we pushed our way on northward and we were almost famished when we saw an Indian hut. Upon coming into it we found it. empty. The other two men rushed to the cupboard while I picked up a copy of Virgil which was lying on the table and looking in the front of it. I found the name of a man with the words 'Marietta, O., under it. It seems we were in the hut of a civilized Indian who had gone to school in Marietta. The Indian came in soon. I told him who we were and where we had been. He said that he was an Indian and that he was a Confederate, but he was more than that, he was a Christian and that as we were in need and had called upon him, he would help us. He then got us up a good din-ner and took us to a trail leading over the mountains. We followed this and were son in Arkansas. Here we were captured by bushwhackers and we were kept with a troop of these for several weeks. They at last handed us over to the jail at Washington, Ark., and we were crowded with a lot of Confederate, and Union sympathizers in the second story of the jail. We made a plan of essape from here. I had a knife which I carried in my boot-leg. We made a file of this and filed one of the bars of the jail window so that we could slip it down and crawl out. Now, the mountains. We followed this and wn and crawl out Now the thing of it was to get a rope, and we bought one for $5, pretending that we wanted it for a game. We inaugurated the game of Copenhagen in the prison with this, and one night when prison with this, and one night when the Confederates in the prison were all asleep, we tied this to the iron bars and slipped out. We intended to wait for a dark night, but none coming we tried to escape when it was bright moonlight. The last man who got out scraped the wall with his foot, and the guard heard him and made for us. The result was that we were captured after a lively run and were carried back to Tyler. My prison life altogether lasted about ten months, and as I look over the hardships of it and those of my attempted escapes I wonder that I was able to endure them." Representative Grady of North Carolina served three months in Camp But ler, about seven miles from Springfield Ill. He was captured at Arkansas Pos by Gen. Sherman and carried on a boat north to Memphis, and thence to Camp Butler. After he was through with hi prison life he was taken south, and an attempt to escape was made by cutting a hole through the box of the car, but this was discovered and frustrated.

Representative Kilgore of Texas entered the army as lieutenant, and was adjutant general of the Confederate army of Tennessee when he was wounded at Chickamauga. He was captured during this battle and was carried to Camp Morton at Indianapolis, and there taken to Camp Chase and to Fort Delaware. At Fort Delaware he had planned to escape. He was in the bar-racks outside the fort, and several of his fellow prisoners and himself planned to jump into the water and swim for it to Delaware City. One or two men did get away in this way, but Gen. Kilgore was not among them, and he remained in the fort until he was exchanged.

Representative Buchanan of Virginia was taken prisoner at Gettysburg on the 3d of July, 1863, and he remained in Fort Delaware until 1865, when he was exchanged.

Representative Rice A. Pierce of Tennessee was wounded and captured in a cavalry fight near Jacksonville, Tenn., in 1864, and was in the north-ern prisons during the war. Representative Andrew Stewart of Representative Andrew Stewart of Pennsylvania entered the army as a private and came out of it an assistant adjutant-general. He was confined in Libby, Macon, Charleston, Columbia and other southern prisons for over a year and can sing the whole gamut of prison wees.

Brashear, La., when he was captured He was in the hands of the Confeder ates for only a very short time and was soon parolled... John R. Fellows of New York was in the southern army and he was a staff officer under Gen. Van Doren's departomeer under Gen. Van Doren's department when he was captured at the surrender of Fort Hudson. He was imprisoned at Johnson's Island for some time and then sent south and released at Fort Delaware. He describes the life at Johnson's Island as not at all bad as a prison experience, and says the prisoners were made up of officers and that they had made up of officers and that they had lectures and schools and different kinds of games. Col. Fellows is said to have been one of the most active amusement makers of this prison, and at one time he was a part of an amateur troupe there which gave the old-time farce of Box and Cox. in which Col. Fellows took the part of "Box." He says that the bill of fare was by no means that of Delmonico's, still for prison fare it was not so terribly bad.

LAY SERMONS.

"In my Father's house are many mansions. These are the words of the Master to his disciples. His earthly work among them was almost finished and the time of his crucifixion was drawing near, He was with them at the last supper they were to have together before his death, gathered in a quiet chamber, where, undisturbed by the busy throngs which filled the city's streets, they could hold that tender and sacred com munion which is so priceless to those who are one in spirit and in faith. In the whole Bible there are no words more comforting to the human heart than those which Christ spake to his disciples at this supreme hour. What a difference do they make in our hopes and prospects beyond the grave! Death is not going to take us out into a wide, homeless world, but into the realm of the "many mansions," which the love of God has prepared for his children. It is not a solitary land to which we shall go, a place where the spirit is isolated and dwells apart from its fellows, but a land of "many man-sions," where the redeemed shall dwell, and where all the untold millions of heaven's inhabitants may hold delightful intercourse together, talking of God's works and ways, and joining in the celestial harmony of redeeming love.

And what wonderful things will the redeemed soul have to contemplate and enjoy! All the wide and unlimited realm of God's universe will be unrolled pefore the inhabitants of heaven. finitude will be their study. Wherever God is, wherever His creative love and power have been displayed, there may their thoughts wander and their step be led.

And fancy if you can a place where God is not, where His power does not abide and where His omniscient eye does not penetrate! Is there any limit to the infinite, and can you set bounds beyond which it may not pass?

"Let not your hearts be troubled. . . .

In my Father's house are many mansions." Is not this a delightful thought in connection with the life to come! It is not to be a homeless life. "I go to prepare a place for you." Everyone of God's children will have a home there—a place prepared. Isn't that a restful thought? A mansion where we have the property of the proper may dwell. Doesn't that imply that heaven will be a social place? Not long ago a company of friends met to celebrate the 84th birthday of a devoted Christian gentleman. Pleas-ant reminders of the day were given him and many words of congratulation and friendship were spoken. In reply to these he said in his own h pay way: "It will not be long now before I shall be called new before I shall be called to one of caose 'many mansions' which God has prepared for those who love Him, and by and by when you are all there I want you to come and see me. How delightful will be our reunion there; what a welcome I shall have for you and how altogether lovely the things of which we shalt then be able to speak!" to speak!"

To one of those "many mansions"

has this aged saint already passed. His going was like a translation. He fell quietly asleep at night and ere the morning opened his eyes in the celestial land.

No, the life beyond will not be soli-tary, but one of the sweetest and the most intimate communion. All interests will tend Godward, and the same fountains of unfailing knowledge will e open to all. Yet then. as now, may we not learn much from intimate com-panionship from those who have drank deeper of the streams of wisdom than ourselves? All companionship there will be exalted and pure, yet doubtless we shall find different degrees of intelligence among the inhabitants of heaven. The saint who dies today cannot hope to stand at once upon the same lofty heights of heavenly knowledge where Moses and David and Paul stand after their centuries of heavenly life. But they will not hold themselves above us for all that.
They may come and sit with us in our mansion and be our teachers and helpers, or we may walk with them in the "green pastures beside the still waters" while they talk to us of the glories of heaven and the happiness of the redeemed. How must they delight to welcome the newer comers to that bet ter land! They may hurry down the streets of the celestial city as the gates of pearl swing wide to permit the deemed of today to enter, and their welcome will be as sweet and tender, al-most, as the Master's. And how will they delight to see the heavenly mansions become filled with those who, like themselves, have been redeemed through the blood of the Lamb! "Let not your hearts be troubled." Down the long ages comes that admonition to us. And shall we not need it? When sorrow comes let us trust. If we are wanderers and homeless let us look forward to the 'many mansions,' remem-bering that if we are God's children there is one there which Christ has gone to prepare for us. If we are soli-tary and alone let us look forward to the delightful and glorious companion-ship that shall be ours when, clothed in white raiment with crowns of rejoicing upon our heads, we may walk with the redeemed in the streets of the New persedemed in the streets of the New Jerusalem, and rest with them "beside the still waters," or receive them into our one of the "many mansions." There will be no isolation there, no homeless ones, and there our hearts shall nevermore "be troubled." The welcome that shall be ours will make the count of us glad through all our being. Then will all the longings of our hearts be stilled, for, as said the psalmist, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in Thy likeness.'

There came near being a general smash-up on the corner of Spring and First streets at 4:80 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A countryman seated in a light buggy attempted to turn his horse in front of a cable car that was turning the curve and succeeded in getting his borse out of the way, but the dummy struck the tail end of his buggy and dumped the whole outfit on the sidewalk. No damage was done. THE SAN PEDRO LIBEL.

The trial of the Davis libel case was resumed before Judge Shaw and a jury in Department Five yesterday morning. the defendant, who was upon the stand on Friday afternoon, continuing the recital of his troubles with Peck. Speak ing of the West street scheme he stated that Peck had induced him to appear before the Council and denounce it. saying that he would not have it go through for $500. He did so and the scheme was defeated on a tie vote. Next day Peck assured him that he had had an equity in lot 9 of a certain tract, and thanked him profusely on behalf of the citizens for his services. In October, 1890, Peck induced him to interest himself in a scheme to disin-corporate, and at his suggestion pre-sided over a public meeting in opposi-tion to the hoodlum element. On Sunday, the day before the election, Peck met him at church, and, giving him the key of the room in which the election was to be held, asked him to officiate as judge, so as to see that the thing was judge, so as to see that the thing was done fairly. He also told him to keep a lookout for A. M. Carpenter, the attorney, and should he attempt to vote to challenge him on the ground that he was an ex-convict. The scheme fell through, as the votes tied; but neither Peck nor Carpenter appeared. Peck Peck nor Carpenter appeared. Peck afterwards explained that he had been called to Los Angeles to attend a fu-When Peck ran for the office of trustee in 1890 the defendant said he opposed him because he refused if elected to do certain things about the wharf, on the ground that they were im-practicable, and he was in favor of runpracticable, and he was in favor of running the town so as to keep it out of debt. He also expressed himself as being in favor of putting a high license on Nugger Brown's place, but taxing legitimate saloons lightly. Davis charged Peck on that occasion with associating with "hoodlums," and told him that Carpenter was the vilest specimen of humanity in the town, as he had been convicted of perjury, and that he (Davis) had seen him in a maudlin drunken condition at Nigger Brown's a dozen condition at Nigger Brown's a dozen times. Peck retorted that he did not consort with worse men than Davis did, as Savage was a one-eyed Irish — , who laid up with a prostitute, and had left Arizona between two suns Davis replied that much reliance could not be placed in reports, and then in illustration proceeded to relate something which he had heard about Peck's wife.

At this juncture a sensation was caused by Peck, who, jumping to his feet, with his right hand under his coat tail, appealed to the Court for protection, stating that he did not want any of his family matters brought into court in his family matters brought into court in this manner.

The Court refused to interfere, how ever, saying that as he could not tell what the witness was going to say he could not stop him.

Peck slowly resumed his seat, but as his eyes met those of Davis the defendant quailed perceptibly and said that he took no pleasure in reciting these un-pleasant details.

District Attorney McLachlan re-marked sarcastically that his appear-ance belied this statement, to which the defendant retorted, sotto voce: "Pil see you out of the courtroom, sir..." Davis then stated that his object in publishing the open letter was that of defending himself against Peck's as-persions and of showing his relations with him. He said that he did not intend to circulate the letters at first, but when Peck sneered at him in church or Sunday night he was roused and on reaching home was unable to sleep all night. At 4 o'clock on Monday morning he went out and posted the circular in the most prominent places.

Upon cross-examination the defendas questioned at some reference to the real estate transaction and to the money due him. It was then shown that he had purchased three lots through Peck for $1400. One of these he sold to a Dutchman, who insisted on getting his contract from Peck direct, getting his contract from Peck direct, as he regarded Davis as unreliable. Davis received $50 profit and the money he had paid on it from Peck, who released him from his contract and made a new one with the Dutchman. Subsequently Peck asked him whether or not he would sell the other $350 lot, and sald, it for him to a managed. regarded and sold it for him to a man named Marshall for $375. This left lot 9 still under contract, and he asked Peck to release him from this also, and refund release him from this also, and refund the money, $100, which he had paid on it. Peck said that it would not be fair, as he had paid Clay, his agent, $35 of it in commissions. Davis demurred, but finally agreed to accept $65, to which was added one payment and interest, making the total $78.60. Peck then indorsed on the contract "Unset-tled balance on lot 9, $78.60." Davis demanded the money, but Peck said as the money had been turned over to Kerckhoff, the owner of the lot, he ould have to wait until the lot was

At this juncture the court adjourned for the day, the case going over until Monday morning at 10 o'clock. THE SUPEVISORS SUSTAINED.

Some days ago Judge Wade created quite a sensation by issuing an order directing the Sheriff to purchase furni-ture and fit him up a courtroom, claimture and fit him up a courtroom, claiming that the quarters provided by the county were not suitable. The Supervisors at the time were having the third story of the Courthouse completed as rapidly as possible, and, as ample provision had been made for Judge Wade's accomodation, were not disposed to expend any money until permanent quarters were provided, when it was the intention to furnish them suitably. Judge tention to furnish them suitably. Judge wade, however, became impatient, and issued the order as above stated. The Supervisors promptly applied to the Supervisors promptly applied to the Superme Court for a writ of prohibition, and proceeded with the work of completing the Courthouse, which was finished in due time, and Judge Wade took rossession. The case was vester. took possession. The case was yester-day decided by the Supreme Court, which sustained the Supervisors, as will be seen by the following Associated Press dispatch from San Francisco received last evening:

The Supreme Court handed down an interesting decision today. Judge Wade of Los Angeles was not satisfied with the courtroom and chambers he occupied, and courtroom and chambers he occupied, and although the Supervisors were preparing a courtroom he ordered the Sheriff to pro-vide a suitable room and furnish it. The Supervisors applied to the Supreme Court for a writ prohibiting the judge from en-forcing that order. In granting the writ the Supreme Court holds that Judge Wade's order was evidently made to anticipate the Supervisors. The Supreme Court says the matter of supplying a courtroom and furnishing if rests exclusively with the Supervisors. The Court, however, intimates that if it be found that a courtroom is inadequate, or not properly furnished, it may be that the judge has power to order the Sheriff to furnish furniture, light and fuel.

CLEVER DETECTIVE WORK. How Will Smith Captured the Acton

Burglar. Detective Will Smith of the Southern Pacific Company made a good capture yesterday morning in Acton.

It will be remembered that on the night of the 9th inst. a burglar entered the Southern Pacific's office and got away with $69 and ten tickets. Smith was notified at once and hurried to the scene of the robbery. He found that R. E. Nichols, the agent, was in Los Anyoung man named J. H. Magee, who was in the habit of attending to the office when the agent was out of town.
On looking through the office Mr. Smith found that the door had been pried open from the inside instead of the side, as it would have been opened had the robbery been committed by persons who could not unlock the door. This fact caused Smith to believe that McGee had something to do the robbery, so he set to work on clew and soon tracked some one to a spot near by, where the money was buried. He marked it and then waited developments. In a day or two McGee, who was doing all in his power to make Smith believe that the theft was com mitted by a couple of tramps who have been hanging around town, was seen to spend a piece of the marked money. This convinced Smith that he was on the right track and yesterday when the fellow flashed up some more of the marked money Smith placed him under arrest and brought him to this city. He was taked to the County Jail and locked up after making a full confession.

A New Detective Agency.

The Southern California Detective Agency was organized in this city on the 10th inst., with Capt. W. B. Johnson and Capt. C. G. McKelvey as principals and managers. Both are gentlemen of large experience in detective matters and they propose to do a legitimate, honest, upright and strictly reputable business. They will be assisted by a corps of intelligent and reputable operatives whose character and standing will bear the closest inspection. The managers of this agency are thoroughly acquainted with, all the details of their business and intend to make it well worthy of the patronage of the citizens of Southern California and the public in general. Their offices are located at rooms 76 and 77, Wilson Block, corner First and Spring streets. Agency was organized in this city on Mrs. Harding Whipped on the Highway by Mrs. Hamm.

The Assault Witnessed by Several Hundred People.

Mrs. Hamm's Husband the Cause of the Trouble-No Arrests Made, but Further Developments are Looked for by the Police.

A highly sensational cowhiding took lace almost in front of the central police station at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon between two women, one of whom is the wife of Frank Hamm, the Spring street ticket scalper, and a Mrs. Harding, who lives on Thirty-first street and Maple avenue.

There were but few people in the eighborhood when the circus began, but before the last blow was struck the street was black with an excited mob, who took a deep and flendish interest in the singular exhibition.

From Mrs. Harding, who was inter-viewed at her home by a Times reporter, and several persons who witnessed the fight, Mrs. Hamm and a friend of hers named Mrs. Jackson walked up Second street until they reached a point in front of Nolan's real estate office, when front of Nolan's real estate office, when they came to a standstill and seemed to be watching for some one.

In a few minutes Mrs. Harding came out of the office and Mrs. Hamm was heard to say, in an excited and loud tone of voice, "You will chase my husband, will you?" and, quicker than a flash, she drew a long, slim. lady's pearl-handled riding whip from its hiding place in the folds of her dress and struck the astonished Mrs. Harding a severe blow across the face, cutting an severe blow across the face, cutting an severe blow across the face, cutting an ugly gash.

Mrs. Harding stood her grounds from fright or something else, and before she got her running members in trim Mrs. Hamm brought her whip down at least half a dozen times, but when Mrs. Harding did finally make up her mind to run she displayed considerable ability in that line, and in a very short space of time she went flying into Hamm's office, and engaged in a hurried consultation with that gentleman, but before they had talked more than a ried consultation with that gentleman, but before they had talked more than, a couple of minutes Mrs. Hamm rushed in, closely followed by Mrs. Jackson and several hundred people, who banked up on the sidewalk and scrambled over each other in their efforts to get a sight of the fighters.

As soon as Mrs. Hamm got in striking distance she again brought, the white distance she again brought the whip down on the fleeing woman's shoulders and was about to proceed to give her another good thrashing when Hamm jumped in between the two women and took the whip from his wife, who at once turned on her heel and walked down Spring street.

Mrs. Harding remained a few minutes longer and then hurried to the central police station, where she was in consultation with Chief Glass some time, but the result is not known. At any rate, there were no arrests, and when interviewed Mrs. Harding stated that she did not intend to swear to a complaint against Mrs. Hamm and she was very against Mrs. Hamm and she was very anxious to have nothing said about the affair in the newspapers.

She stated that she was in Nolan's office for the nurses of additional said.

She says she has never had anything to do with Hamm except in a business way, when she purchased railroad tickets from him, and she cannot understand why his wife should be so bitter against her unless it be that Mrs. Hamm wants a "little newspaper notoriety," as Mrs.

Harding put it. Harding put it.

It is possible that there will further developments, as both women are very determined, and when they meet again it is more that possible that there will be another circus.

THE OLD REPROBATE CAUGHT.

The Man Who Has Been Insulting Women

For some days past Deputy Constable Harry Johnston has been on the lookan old man who has been ing himself by walking on crowded streets and grabbing women who pass close to him. He has been known to place his hands on at least ten in one block in an insulting manner, but he is so quick in his motions that he would get out of the way before the indignant woman could identify him and call for assistance.

When arrested yesterday morning on Spring street the old wretch was at his occupation, and placed his hands on two or three ladies before the officer could reach him. The fellow, who is not less than 60 years of age, seemed greatly surprised when taken in custody, and retended that he could not talk a word of English. Pamucino was sworn and testified that when he was going upstairs to the courtroom Clary called him aside and told him that he must do all in his power to convict Goytino. The man was very persistent and was overheard by several people who were standing close by when the conversation took place, and they gave their testimony.

The case was argued on both sides to some extent, and the Court took it under advisement until tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

O, brazen old mounts, you confront us like a dead world, but you cannot hinder the bloom of our valleys, the life and the growth of our tropical clime! Our birds sing, and our bees hum, and the butterfly is as gav as if June were here. The farmer is busy with his plow and sweet indeed is the smell of the freshly-turned earth. Winter knocks in vain at our gates—he cannot enter.

It was early last week that the father of a bright little family was telling me about some of the sayings of his little folks. They were gathered about the table one evening looking at some pictures, one of which appeared to particularly enlist the attention of one wee miss. After studying it for a time in all its details she looked up and said, pointing to it: "That is down in Heaven." The little sister to whom the remark was made turned quickly and promptly responded, "Heaven is up street and not down street, I would have you understand." have you understand."

Another father, who had felt it his duty to correct one of his children, a bright lad of about 4 years, had done so, using a small rod for the purpose, and whipping him as severely as he thought it wise to do considering his tender years. When he was done the child, wiping away the falling tears, looked up with a courageous smile, saying, "I didn't mind it much, did I, papa?"

They have some very gentlemanly conductors upon the electric road. I was out over the hill line a few days was out over the hill line a few days since, and down a side street came running, to catch the cars, a gentleman with a baby in his arms, followed by his wife and a small tot who was clinging to her skirts. The conductor jumped from the car as it stopped, ran to meet his coming passengers, selzed the tiny straggler in his arms and hurried back to the car with her, thus shortening the delay and materially aiding the gratified mother.

A few blocks further on a poor old A few blocks further on a poor old woman with a large bundle was hurrying to reach the car and again the conductor hopped from the platform, took the bundle from her hand and helped her as she mounted the steps and placed her bundle in a safe place for her. The old lady's face fairly shone with the gratitude with which her words were eloquent. "That conductor is a gentleman," said an elegantly is a gentleman," said an elegantly dressed lady. "How few men would have been so thoughtfully kind."

last heavy downpour that the old Los Angeles, with its muddy business thoroughfares, which used to confront us after every rain, was indeed a thing of the past. How clean looked the paved streets and with what comfort we could get about on the well-paved sidewalks! Those old remembrances of sidewalks! Those old remembrances of Los Angeles are not pleasant. But there were some things that were pleasanter then than now. What old resident does not recall regretfully at times the magnificent trees that were cut down to give place to our modern improvements. The grand peppers, how they arched themselves across the streets, and how the glant eucalypti towered above our the glant eucalypti towered above our walks. The mind's eye is filled with a vision of these trees as it turns backward. When shall we as a community appreciate fully the desirability of a renewed tree-growth along our highways? It would not only make our city more attractive, but it would add to its healthfulness, and coolness. I wish that surplus which was left over after the press people had been fed and enter-tained could all of it have been detained could all of it have been devoted to the work of tree-planting along some of our city streets. If I were a rich man with a big heart for public progress the very first thing that I would do would be to contribute generously to this purpose. I would make Los Angeles famous for the multiplicity and beauty of her trees.

Hostilities were opened the other day between a sitting hen and a four-monthsold calf who was given to annoying the prospective mother as she sat upon her nest in a sheltered corner. The calf was not content with the rations provided for him and looked with an eye of vided for him and looked with an eye of hungry longing upon the hay upon which the hen was sitting. At length the intrusiveness of the calf became un-endurable to Mistress Cackler, and as endurable to Mistress Cackler, and as the calf pulled steadily upon the hay the hen suddenly spread her wings, flew upward and lighted upon the back of the young bovine, pecking him furtously. Finally she made a dash at his eyes and left one of them bleeding, when the calf wheeled about and started on a swift run, leaving the hen victorious upon the battlefield. Another illustration, thought I, of the old saw: "When she will she will, and you may depend on't."

I heard of a bit of romance in the garden one day last week. A certain lady in the city had employed a gardener a big hulking, unkempt fellow with an honest face, to put her grounds in order. Faithfully he worked stirring up the rich soil and digging among her precious plants, she every now and then going out to give him the needed instructions. After a few days she went out as usual and saw sitting at a little distance from the place where he was at work a plain-faced, smiling little woman who had brought her sewing with her, and who sat cheerfully chatting with the busy laborer. How tenderly he eyed her now and then, and how pleased was he with her kindly talk! Work did not seem so hard to him while she sat near giving him her helpful words and approving smile. The sunshine looked brighter and the earth greener for her coming, and the burden of his work lighter, for was it not for her that he was toiling?

And she—"my husband is a good man," she said, "and he cares for me well. I help him all I can by sewing, and we are getting on well together and are paying for a nice little house of four rooms. Yes, I am very happy," she added, smiling as she looked up at her young David, "and I think one is a great deal happier to be married if one gets a good husband."

It was a charming picture of contented gladness.

It was a charming picture of con-tented gladness. The SAUNTERER.

THE LAND WE LIVE IN.

During the past week, while closed in on all sides by dark clouds, which were pouring out their copious floods of ferti-lizing waters upon the land we live in, a great master artist was at work upon a magnificent picture behind the watery curtain. This Sunday morning, looking forth over the freshened land, the clouds nearly all vanished, we saw that a master hand had painted a pure white band all along the inner rim of our verdant valley, which white line, lying beneath a clear sky with its glancing lights and flooding sunshine, presented, in conjunction with the green foothills, a picture lovelier far than ever came from the brush of world-famed masters. Great depths of snow clothed the mountains lying along the north and east—those frozen solitudes where Winter holds his court. But the valleys smiled, for Summer was in their lap. "Thus far and no farther," commanded the mild temperature of our sunny slope. "You must stop upon those hilltops," the order seemed to say to the snow. "There is but one way you can come in the guise of crystal-flowing streams, by and by, to nourish our growing vines and trees and flowers." a master hand had painted a pure white tal-nowing streams, by and by, to nourish our growing vines and trees and flowers."

Looking up to those snow-clad summits one almost feels as if the snows which have been pelting our Eastern brothers upon the misty Atlantic shores had marched across the continent to our borders and tried to enter, but had found our semi-tropic sentinels, who peremptorily ordered them to halt upon those lofty Sierra tops, if they would preserve their identity.

The land we live in. Who of her many children does not love to speak its praises? A land of perpetual summer, of perennial freshness and bloom, of unfailing fruits and bounteous harvests. There are 865 days to every year of its life, and each day has a life to be talked about, and to be enjoyed.
As the years roll along this land in which we live, this daughter of summer will not grow gray-headed nor become decrepit, because her youth and beauty will last as long as the genial sun and mild climate which make her character. As she now reclines like a beautiful water nymph emerged from the surf that breaks upon these shores, with her head resting upon green foothills, looking upward to the snow-clad summits, her feet toying with the slivery waters of the Pacific as they creep in upon the white sands of the beach, so with coming years will she be seen with face as fair, and blooming, with the same smile parting her lips, the same warm, bright sunshine playing with her tresses.

I see nothing but the brightest future for our valley, a time when there shall dwell within her limits a people as enlightened, happy, contented and prosperous as the soil can produce. The people who come hither are captivated by this land at first sight. It woos them like a lover.

by this land at first sight. It woos them like a lover.

And nature here with its glorious sunshine and equable climate loves to have the waters made use of as they fall from the clouds or flow through our irrigating ditches; to have her soil broken and set to fruits and vines and whatsoever pleases the husbandman, and in return for this she abundantly gives from the wonderful fertility of the soil fruitful and beautifying growths. She is quick in her response to the touch of labor, and with the richest of abundance she rewards him.

Last week and the week previous had something to say in this column of the books which we and our children should read. As much might be said in regard to the books which we should not read, for their name is legion. We find them in our bookstores, in our pub-lic and too often in our private libraries. There are many of these books which at a casual glance seem to have nothing morally objectionable, which yet indirectly inculcate principles which yet indirectly inculcate principles which are wholly wrong and which tend to sap the very foundations of pure morality. The world is flooded with books of this character, flooded with trashy and sensational stories that tend, in more ways than one, to demoralize their readers and to destroy their love for the better class of books, which, to those who read wisely, are both instructive and entertaining. I should far rather that a child should read no books whatever than to have him read books whatever than to have him read books whatever than to have him read books of this character.

The realistic novel is also something which we should put far off from our children. Only a few days since a book of this class was sent me for review. It was a story of intrigue and shame, thoroughly objectionable and shameless from beginning to end. A work with an attractive title, but filled with the policy of word correction. I should be poison of moral corruption. I should as soon think of thrusting a dagger into the heart of a child as of putting such a the heart of a child as of putting such a work into his hands to read.

No work of fiction, excepting those from the pens of well-known authors should be allowed in the hands of our children, until it has first been submitted to our own inspection. We cannot be too guarded, too watchful in this respect, for bad books are no less dangerous than evil companions. Indeed, we enter into the closest companionship enter into the closest companionship with the authors with whom we are the most familiar, and it is impossible to measure the influence which they exert upon our lives. The words which they write enter into the secret ear of our write enter into the secret ear of our inner consciousness, and if wrong they are like a canker in the soul eating away its purity and uprightness.

For this reason I would say, mothers, be cautious in regard to the books which your children read, for, their characters will be moided by them and their whole lives will be influenced by their teaching. Given them books and their whole lives will be infinenced by their teaching. Give them books which shall afford cheerful pictures of life, which shall give them large glimpses of the wide realm of nature, which shall teach them lessons of honor, of truthfulness and uprightness, and which shall quicken within them a spirit of emulation for all that is good and honest, and sincerce with the description of course a child cannot always be kept from a knowledge of the existence of evil in the world, but it is well to let that knowledge come with accompanying words of admonition from the parent or guardian. for the temptations that he must meet, and so train him that he shall be strong to resist and overcome them, but do not leave him to familiarize himself with evil through the pages of the realistic and the society novel. They are not profitable for any one to read, but they are absolutely dangerous for the child and cannot fail to leave their impress for evil uron him. But the

the child and cannot fail to leave their impress for evil upon him. But the good book is among the best of his friends and councilors. Read such books with him when you may, but when you cannot you safely, put them in his hands feeling that he will be the wiser for the hours he spends in their companionship. He may grow merry with the characters of Dickens' creation or enter into he saddens and their contraction or enter in the saddens and their country into the sadd with the characters of Dickens' crea-tion, or enter into the sadness and the pathos of the lives which some of them live, and he may also see something of crime and wrong as it was portrayed by the pen of this great master of fiction, but the wrong is always painted in such a light as to become abhorent, and to make the the child desire to shun the wrong-doer.

It takes so little to tarnish the purity of character we cannot be too watchful in guarding it, nor too alert while we stand as sentinels at the post of danger.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

An English Physician Says Women Must Marry or Take a Profession.
(New York Sun.)
Dr. Arabella Kenealy, a noted physician of London, has, from her special practical medical experience among women, deduced the theory that women must make a choice between professional and married life. She says: must make a choice between professional and married life. She says: "Women should not attempt to carry on a profession after marriage. I mean the women of the upper or middle classes who go into the professions. It is not necessary that they should be the bread winners; that duty should devolve upon the husband, and I am confident that the rising generation would be healthier and stronger in every way if the mothers would exert themselves less. I look anxiously at every baby that comes under my notice in the hope that I shall find some improvement in the type, some increase in stamina, compared with the generation that has preceded; but intead of this there is only steady deterioration observable. This deterioration is particularly noticeable among the children of very active mothers. The cleverest and most highly-educated women, the women who take the most active part in public affairs, have the most weakly and puny children. Another thing, women are going into too active forms of exercise. When a young married woman tells me that she is the captain of a cricket eleven or a football team, I can only say that I am perfectly aghast. Women must place before themselves the alternative to earn their living, to exercise their faculties, and to gratify their ambitions in a professional career or to become good wives and mothers, and if they choose the domestic life they must recognize that they must sacrifice their personal happiness and ambition in the recognize that they must sacrifice their personal happiness and ambition in the future happiness and success of their children?

P. Marker, who is working out at A.
H. Smith's sawmill on Rifle Creek, set H. Smith's sawmill on Rifle Creek, set a large trap, thinking to catch a monster bear, whose tracks were seen in the neighborhood. Several days after he went out to look at his trap, but instead of the bear he found a large eagle, the largest, perhaps, ever seen in the Rocky Mountains. The eagle had been caught in the powerful jaws of the trap by one leg just above the claws. He had dragged the immense trap, which was secured to a log by a chain, into some brush more than twenty-five feet from the spot where trapped, and was dead. So large and strong was his leg that it was not broken. The eagle was too large to carry, so the trapper cut both legs off as trophies. He measured the huge bird and it was twelve feet from tip to tip of its outstretched wings.

of Dr. Wong. Consultations absolutely free. The following are a few of the testimonials of patients cured by him:

Four years ago my daughter, Virginia Bell, was treated by Dr. Wong for what eminent physicians called hip disease, and had pronounced incurable after treating her for seven or eight years. Dr. Wong's disgnosis was that she was afflicted with one of the thirteen forms of cancer. His medicine affected a permanent cure in seven months' time. Two years ago my grandson became billed in one eye. Dr. Wong restored his sight and the eye to a perfectly healthy condition in three weeks' time.

For seven months I was treated by five different doctors, none of whom stated what my disease was. During that time I suffered terribly and continued to fail until t became a skeleton. For sevens months I had to be dressed, led and have my water drawn; finally my feet, limbs, hands and face became swollen. I could not rise from a chair and could scarcely walk, and walk had so have my water drawn from fifteen to twenty times a day. My friends considered would not last many days. I then—three months ago—commenced treating with Dr. Wong. This does not make the month of the month of the swelling had left me and I could walk as well as for years before. I now weight as much as I ever did and feel better than I have felt for fifteen years. I alway to the work of the months ago and the swelling had left me and I could walk as well as for years before. Two Days Among the Vineyards and Shaped Track-Looking About the City.

A Raymond & Whitcomb excursion train, consisting of three vestibuled Pullman coaches and a dining car, arrived in this city yesterday after conveying a party of representative Eastern fruit and produce dealers through the citrus belt of Southern California. The object of the excursion was that of giving the Eastern dealers an opportunity of inspecting for themselves the citrus fruit culture; and for the past two days the excursionists have been escorted through all the largest orchards and vineyards along the line of the Santa Fé Company's kite-shaped track. A Badly Mixed Case.

Business was dull in the Police Court yesterday. Only one drunk was in the dock and one case of disturbing the peace was tried. A Mrs. Colby and her laughter of Boyle Heights were tried on complaint of a man named Francis Frank, who claimed that while he Frank, who claimed that while he was holding the girl's hand the old lady cut him with a knife. The defendants swore that they had been quarreling over some tin cans that were thrown over some tin cans that were thrown from one yard to the other, and that Frank cut his hand with one of the cans. The testimony was so conflicting that the judge discharged the defendants.

The Humble but Numerous Peanut. If has been reported that the peanut crop is in fair condition. It will be about 65 per cent. of last year's crop, about 65 per cent. of last year's crop, which was about the largest ever grown, 5,000,000 bushels being harvested. But the peanut growers are far from being happy. The present price at first cost varies from 2% to 8 cents. That is below the cost of production, and growers want 4 to 5 cents. Peanuts grow in a few counties in southeastern Virginia, middle Tennesee and North Carolina, and the crop is uncertain and expensive. There is a national peanut union, which is urging sundry measures to protect the growers, sundry measures to protect the growers, one of which is the advice of the Far-mers' Alliance, to hold their produce and not let speculators gobble all the profits.

A Texis Steer, which has been the eading theatrical attraction the past week, is a play that has received much attention from the critics all over the country, and the views about it have been as diverse as the writers.

That it is not a great play may be coneded, but it has many points of true comedy in it, and pictures with much skill and acuteness the creature buys votes and is proud of it as we know "practical politics;" the once ruggedly honest cattle-baron of the big lains metamorphosed into the intriguing land-grant statesman at Washthe designing maiden who works the callow Congressman with a bit of business that is familiar to city dwellers everywhere and is but an elaboration of the old "panel game" of the ration of the old "panel game" of the urban settlements; the colored worker who goes to the capital for the reward he has been promised by the local "boss" of his section; and the country girl and her mother, who pine for a sight of the b'g world that lies beyond the grassy expanses where only the oellowing of the herds and the whoop of the cowboy is heard in the land.

All these characters are drawn with a true appreciation of the comedy element that enters into certain phases of our American civilization, and though our American civilization, and though the playwright may have introduced some scenes that border closely on the farcical, one cannot say that there is farcical, one cannot say that there is anything in the piece that may be termed "impossible."

The three "visiting statesmen" are not so out of drawing that one would not contract to go into the wilds of the Lone Star State and "dig up" their copies in numbers sufficient to prove the point that they are so nearly typical that the honest critic would have to accept them as specimens of the political cept them as specimens of the political genus of no small section, and if he has ever served on a State central commitever served on a State central commit-tee or a county executive committee he must acknowledge that Mr. Hoyt has traduced neither of the great parties of the country in picturing the methods by which imbeciles and ignoramuses of far less worth and dignity than "Maverick Brander" are put into places of trust and honor in this great Government of

Some writers assert that the play is 'mischievous.'' We can not agree with "mischievous." We can not agree with this view, for there is nothing in it laudatory of the means and this view, for there is nothing in it laudatory of the means and methods employed to encompass the ends attained, but on the other hand it is so nearly a true drawing of scenes not impossible in this country's political world, that one on whom any dramatic work, could make an impression would be more likely to be careful not to copy the "Brander" plan of campaign than to be drawn into the practices which sent him to Congress.

It is perfectly fair for the play-builder to fashion his productions from the materials he finds at hand, so long as the results are not offensive to decency or good taste; that Mr. Hoyt has only done this in A Texas Steer must be conceded. Therefore it follows that his work is not only fair to the age in which we live, but is besides extremely clever in the definess with which the phases of life lymned upon the playwright's canvas are portrayed. In noticing the play's first production on Tuesday evening last the writer adverted to certain scenes as bordering upon coarseness. He still clings to that the very business referred to "gets the laugh" every night, and as it is the comedy playwright's purpose to amuse the very business referred to "gets the laugh! every night, and as it is the comedy playwright's purpose to amuse he may be excusable for sticking to his text, even in the face of good taste.

The people get just as good plays as they demand, perhaps, yet in our opinion the playwright ought to be something of a teacher of manners and deportment, and he can well afford to forego some of the laughter he gets for his creations if it is secured at the expense of those features of gentility which go so far to make up our higher civiliza-

In the great unknowable by and by we will perhaps learn why a suffering public has to submit to such dramatic monstrosities as Sport McAllister. It certainly is too much of a conundrum for the ordinary mortal to answer, and when one sees it dragging its bleary form through three hours of a human being's life, he must wish for some sort of a bichloride of gold cure that can once for all free the stage from repeated attacks of the wild delirium of which it is an exaggerated type.

This week we are to have some playing that will be true art, for the great and only Jefferson is coming to us for three nights. Though The Rivals was first produced

Three nights.

Though The Rivals was first produced at Covent Garden, London, nearly a hundred and twenty years ago, it is as full of vitality as when it made Sheridan's success as a comedian. Such a combination of artists as are brought together for the enactment of the play at the Grand this week has seldom been seen. Mr. Jefferson's impersonation of the braggart, fighting "Bob Acres," is one of the funniest figures the stage of our day has known. And then think of Mrs. John Drew's, "Mrs. Malaprop," the dear, conceited old lady whose vocabulary and vanity are tangled up in such a hopeless snarl! The Heir-at-Law, which will be given the last of the week, was first produced in 1797. It is full of fetching situations and fine lines and gives full play to the power of the comedians of Mr. Jefferson's great company, which comprises the following players, many of whom are stars and all of whom have a reputation behind them. They are: Mrs. John Drew, Viola Allen, Fanny Denham Rouse, Blanche Bender, Louis James, J. H. Barnes, W. F. Owen, George W. Denham, Fitzhugh Owsley, Joseph Warren, H. W. Odlin and Joseph Logan. The Rivals will be given Thursday evening and Saturday matinée, and The Heir-at-Law on Friday and Saturday nights. The sale of seats begins at the Grand Operahouse tomorrow.

The Los Angeles Theater will remain dark, so far as the drama is concerned, until late in the month, when Roland Reed comes with his famous new play, A Club Friend.

This system of practice is effectual in the cure of Catarrh, Throat diseases, Bropchitis Asthma and Consumption.

The earlier symptoms of consumption consist in a weariness at times or a disposition to remain passive, a peculiar sensitiveness to the effects of cold: also breathlessness upon moving or ascending a hill or stairs; a slight, hacking cough, with or without expectoration. Bying pains throughout the chest or back or under the shoulder blades. These symptoms are more noticeable toward or in the night; slight fever in the afternoon. Cold feet and hands, and in many cases a blue lividity of the lips and roots of the finger nails.

It is unnecessary to give the symptoms in the more advanced stages of consumption, as there is scarcely a family in our State wherein its ravages have not been felt to a greater or less degree, and while this is true, it is no less true that had those persons who became the easy victims to this foul destroyer during the early stages of their drived partaken of the benefits to be devartaken of the benefits to be devartaken of the benefits to be derived the content of the content of the practice of the content of the probably equal, if not superior to any climate in the world, yet all will agree that something more heroic is required to kill and destroy the living germs found so numerously in this disease—for all scientific, intelligent and thinking people concede the fact that consumption does arise from a living germ found distributed along the disease that consumption destroy the living germs found so numerously in this disease—for all scientific, intelligent and thinking beople concede the fact that consumption does arise from a living germ found distributed along the disease that consumption dees arise from a living germ found distributed along the disease that consumption dees caree cuttiffic, intelligent and thinking beople concede the fact that consumption dees arise from a living germ found

This bird is and has been for Blaine for a long time, for I think he is the biggest, brainest and most popular of all big, brainy and popular Americans. But up here I appear to be playing a lone hand in this Presidential game. Well, the Eagle is a free lance in the limitless realms of air, if he is anything; and although I am bolted down here to a large cube of granite with an inch bolt, the spirit of the fowl is unchanged and I therefore utter a scream for and strapped-down trousers.

He must be something above the average, for he has been in the eye of average, for he has been in the eye of the country now, for quite twenty-five years, and for twenty years of that time has been prominently talked of for the big office at Washington. And most surprising of all, though once defeated by that obese apostle of free trade and peddler of platitudes, G. Cleveland, twice since then might he have had a renomination but for pushing it aside with his iron hand. Where is there any other name enrolled upon my country's history that can equal this record?

Though he will never be President of my chosen land, he has a place in the hearts of the people of this era that no President has ever filled except it be Washington and Lincoln; and beside most of the men, that have filled that great position, he is as the sun beside

This issue of the journal of civiliza-tion, which keeps an eagle bird con-stanty on tap, goes to a number of the outlying provinces by special train, which is hereafter to be a daily feature of life in the Southwest.

To the narry yeoman of the foothills, and the dwellers in the burgs along the way, the Eagle sends greeting and congratulations upon getting their dose of intellect, facts and information at so early an hour. As I sit on this breezy outlook and watch Mr. Wade's cars wading through the dews of early morning, chew-chawing smoke into the at-mosphere, and whooping wild whistles of delight into the ears of the slumber-ing citizens who are not expecting their orning paper for two hours vet. I feel morning paper for two hours yet, I feel mighty proud that my lot has been cast with an institution that has a nerve on it like a thoroughbred, and I yearn to turn loose these idle, gilded wings, and with a scream of rapture leap into the arching blue and chase the howling iron horse on his way along the base of the snowy ange where the orange orchards glean range where the orange orchards gleam in the dawn, and their odors make the Men brethren of the outhoops—shake!

The Eagle has his eye on the young man in the City Attorney's office, and wonders as he gazes when he is going to get into action on that State Reform School business. The Bird of Freedom desires to assure the attorney "for the people" that it is quite time to limber up and get things moving, for the populace is getting mighty restless, and niace is getting mighty restless, and are making remarks that, if the re-marked-about could hear as I hear them, would make his ears tingle like them, would make his ears tingle like he had a crack in the jaw from the historic Bostonian, John L.

The thing has not blown over and it isn't going to be allowed to blow over, and the chaps who think so might just as well get 'shet' of that idea now as well as later on. The fact is, the people asy if everything at Whittier is dead straight and on the square the parties under suspicton would be howling for an investigation. The fact that they do not do this is dead sure testimony that there is something about it that won't stand the glare of that fierce white light popularly supposed to beat upon thrones and things. If I was a District Attorney instead of an Eagle would not stand still and let people point their fingers at me and say ugly things, but would move on the boodlers' works "immediately," as Ulysses Grant once moved, and at least vindicate myself. At present the load seems to be all one pair of shoulders. If they were shoulders I would endeavor to shift

Now if there is a planet in the abyss that has a perfect right to decorate itself in any manner it blamed pleases it is "old Sol," into whose deeps I am popularly supposed to gaze without a quiver of an eyelid. But the inside business of the sun spots is that there is a Whittier over there and the black area is only the places that have not been whitewashed yet. One of these days the fellows that run things on the warm orb of day will put through an investigation, the artist with the wide brush and the whitening bucket will be called out, and the sun perfect right to decorate itself in any bucket will be called out, and the sun spots will temporarily disappear just as the earth spots do that we all know

HOW TO GET GOOD MEAT.

Properly "Refrigerated" it Gets Tenderer and More Toothsome Every Day. Most people nowadays know how wonderfully meat is improved by being kept a few days or weeks in cold storage, and those who are at all particular will buy no other kind. The meat is not only sweeter and tenderer, but it is far more wholesome. In fact, it may be asserted broadly that no meat is tit to eat until it is thoroughly cured, and the longer it hangs, without tainting, the better it gets. Not long ago some of the leading physicians of California joined in a card stating it to be "a wellestablished fact that animal meat foods are not wholesome until the animal heat, and gases generated thereby, are properly treated by some process that take all the animal heat out of the meat, such, for instance, as a well adjusted cooling room or refrigerator. After passing through this process the meat becomes cool, tender and sweet. It is more easily dissolved by the juices of the stomach, and therefore healthier to the consumer." And then they went on to say: "We would suggest to our meat merchants to supply themselves with coolers or refrigerators by which, during the heat of summer, they can properly treat their meats."

during the heat of summer, they can properly treat their meats."

It has been found, however, that cold storage alone—that is, in the old-fashioned refrigerator without any circulation of air—does not accomplish the best results. The meat may be kept a long while, it is true, but, no proper provision being made for the escape of the noxious gases arising from it, it is wet or slimy when taken out and speedily taints. So far but one principle has been discovered that wholly overcomes this difficulty and that is found in the cooling-rooms and refrigerators constructed by the Gurney Refrigerating Company of San Francisco. In these there is an even temperature of about 48° and a steady and perfect circulation of air, moving at from three to seven miles an hour, and passing conseven miles an hour, and passing con-stantly over the ice. And right here is the important point. The gases from the meat are drawn to the ice precisely as iron filings are drawn to a magnet, and they pass off and out of the refrig-erator with the drippings from the ice and are not reabsorbed by the meat.

W. L. Kestner & Co., of the "Pacific Market," corner of Fifth and Spring streets, have just had one of these fine streets, have just had one of these fine refrigerators put up in their, place of business. They had a good refrigerator of the old kind, capacious enough for all their needs and in perfect order, but they were entirely clear as to its shortcomings, as alluded to above. Hearing of the "Gurney," they investigated its advantages as thoroughly as they do most other things relating to their business and ordered one, the change from the one system to the other involving an expense of something like $1000. The thing works perfectly, as anybody can see who will take the trouble to look at it, and is besides a handsome look at it, and is besides a handsome piece of furniture. Instead of being damp and slimy the meat now is dry and sweet and wholesome. Its quality and sweet and wholesome. Its quality is improved 50 per cent.

The Kestners, W. L. and Charles, have been long in the business and their reputation for good meats is widespread. They unifornily pay the wholesale butcher 1 cent per pound more than anybody else pays, simply that they may have first pick and choice of what is offered. They thus secure the very best there is. With this improved way of taking care of the meat and keeping it for weeks if desirable their customers will enjoy advantages that no other butcher in Los Angeles can ofcustomers will enjoy advantages that no other butcher in Los Angeles can offer them, just now, at least. And peo-ple who want to know what a real toothsome roast or steak is and who have been complaining that they can not get such in California should give Messrs. Kestner a call. A most gratifying surprise is in store for them

A Pasadena Boy Carries Off the First Honors.

The Exhibit to Remain Open Today, and Tomorrow Evening There Will be an Auction Sale of Eggs-Notable Exhibits.

The crowd at the poultry show yesterday was larger than at any time since its opening. All the awards have now been made and the rostrum was filled with special prizes valued at over $1000, and comprising everything from a box of toothpicks to an incubator offered by the Santa Ana Incubator Company for the largest and best display of fowls from any breeder. This prize lies between O. J. Albee of Lawrence, Cal., and Mr. Bailey, of Pacific Incubator Company of Oakland. If the rival incubator man wins the prize the query arises, will he put it to practical use in opposition to his own? There are also fifty boxes of oranges among these special prizes and several very handsome silver cups. Rob Rowan the Pasadena boy poultry-fancier, won the first special prize for the largest number of birds scoring over 90 points. The prize was a box of Hiawatha plug cut tobacco from the tobacco house Oren Scotten, the president of

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

The last regular meeting of the S. M. Club was devoted to Weber and Bennett. Among the numbers upon the first part of the programme were "The Fountain," a characteristic bit of Bennett's, strongly imitative of Mendels sohn, as is all his work, and a heartbreaking little song of sadness called "To Chloe in Sickness;" the first played by Miss Blanche Rogers, and the second sung by Mrs. J. D. Cole. The second half of the evening was given up to Von Weber, and was much enlivened by some good concerted music for vioby some good concerted music for vio-lin, plane and organ from Prof. Stamm, Mrs. Jennings and Miss Percival. #### BASEBALL.

The Los Angeles Team Almost Completed

-All Good Men.
Manager Glenalvin has written Mr. Vanderbeck that he has signed Jack Roach, the south-paw twirler who was with Lincoln last year. This all but completes the Los Angeles club, as the management now has only a shortstop to select and a first-baseman to close with. McCauley will more than likely a fancy salary.

There will be at least six and perhaps eight left-handed hitters in the team. Wright, Glenalvin, Tredway, Newman, Hulen and Roach will all annoy the right-handed pitchers.

The new national playing rules contemplate giving a batter his sbase on three balls. This will encourage headwork and good control in the box.

Last Friday Miss C. S. Slack, principal of Alpine street school, assisted by her teachers, gave a reception to the patrons of the school. No attempt was made at special display, the idea being to become better acquainted with the parents and interest them in the actual work done by the pupils. Class exercises in singing by note, reciting short poems from the authors studied, reading, number work, science work and calisthenic drill were given. Written work covering the work of the term was on exhibition.

A large number responded to the invitations sent out and their kind words of commendation and evident apprecia-tion of the work accomplished were very encouraging and gratifying.

THE CITRIC SITUATION.

A Disastrous Season for the Orange-growers.

The Short Reduction in Freight Rates Injurious.

Markets Flooded With Windfalls and Frosted Fruit.

Buyers and Sellers Both Holding Back-Prices Demoralized-The Damage by Frost and Its Lessons-Late Oranges-Big Plantings.

The present season is a disastrous one for Southern California orangegrowers in more respects than one Not only have the orchards suffered severe damage through wind and frost, but the shipment of damaged fruit is keeping down prices and making sales difficult. There has been much conflict of opinion, also misrepresentation, as to the condition of the market, buyers and land-owners seeking to make loss appear as trivial as possible, in which course they have been abetted by the local press, while growers have tried to make matters appear even worse than they really are in order to "boost" prices. An unprejudiced view of the actual situation may therefore be of interest just now.

The reduction in the freight rate on oranges from $1.25 to 90 cents a hun oranges from $1.25 to 90 cents a nun-dred, made by the Transcontinental As-sociation, to last for the brief period of fifteen days, from February 1 to 15, has worked injury rather than benefit to the shippers. The Santa Fé Com-pany put the reduced rate into effect a few days before the first of the month, and announced that it would be mainand announced that it would be main and announced that it would be main-ained during the season, but, under he pressure which was brought to bear pon that company, it quickly retracted as promise and will restore the old rate on the 16th. A fifteen-days' re-duction, especially when half of that period is covered by a rainstorm that provented shipments, is little else than a mockery. Besides that, it is leading to the shipment of quantities of frosted to the shipment of quantities of frosted and wind-damaged fruit, upon which the growers have to make a little over the growers have to make a little over the expenses of shipment. The mar-kets are glutted with this damaged fauit and prices are demoralized. It is almost impossible to get quotations. It is doubtful whether half a dozen carloads of perfectly sound fruit have gone East or will go before end of the month. Protests have already begin to arrive from East-ters dealers at the quality of company ern dealers, at the quality of oranges which are being sent forward. Cheap fruit is urged by many commission men, because there is more money in it un-der the circumstances. California's der the circumstances. California's reputation suffers in consequence. The poor oranges hold the market down and it is next to impossible to make anything on the better fruit. Then, the weather in the East has been so cold that oranges, even on heated piers, freeze over night. In San Francisco there is at present scarcely any sale for choice fruit, but trash is plentiful and offered at 50 cents a box, or peddled around the streets at 10 cents a dozen. The San Francisco papers are com-plaining that many cases of stomach trouble have been caused by eating im-mature or frosted oranges.

To add to the demoralization Florida

To add to the demoralization Florida has had a heavy crop. That section also has had a freeze. A box of Florida's choicest selected oranges was received in Los Angeles a few days ago. They are large, smooth-skinned, reddish yellow in color, with a fine aromatic odor, but half the box was frosted and unmarketable, although sent as a choice sample. On top of all this a New Orleans paper announces that one dealer in Cuba has contracted for 5,000,000 oranges to ship to the United States, the price paid being $8$ to $10$ per 1000, the quality not extra. Southern California growers will have to carefully watch national legislation and see that the duty on oranges is not rethat the duty on oranges is not re-moved or this country would be flooded with the cheap-labor oranges of Europe, Cuba, Mexico and Tahiti.

Orange buyers profess to have made

Orange buyers process to have made little money last year, and they probably tell the truth. Consequently, they are holding back. On the other hand, growers who have good fruit will not part with it on such a market as the and the other darsn't." Growers last year organized the Fruit-growers' Union of Southern California, which has se-cured many members. It was incorpor-ated a month ago. It claims to have broken up the buyers' league, and exbroken up the buyers' league, and expects to cause more competition. The organization aims to make the grower independent; to so regulate shipments that there shall not be a glut in any market, causing California oranges to compete against themselves; to obtain concessions from transportation companies, and to open up new markets. The inauguration of a home market by local auction sales; also contemplated The inauguration of a home market by local auction sales is also contemplated. The damage done by frost to the orange crop in Southern California during the unusually cold spell of Christmas week was more severe than has yet been admitted, and it is useless to disguise the fact. The full extent of the damage is not even yet known. The only Infallible test of a frozen orange is to cut and taste it. Appearances are deceitful, but the pithy, insipid taste of the frosted fruit is unmistakable.

One of the lessons taught by this vis-One of the lessons taught by this visitation is that many orange groves have been planted in sections where nature never intended an orange tree to grow. We are, at the best, on the northern limit of the true citrus belt, and extra care is necessary in selecting a site for an orchard. Because and pranty trees. limit of the true citrus belt, and extra care is necessary in selecting a site for an orchard. Because an orange tree will grow and bear fruit in ordinary years it does not, by any means, follow that the orange is a safe crop to grow in that locality, as many have discovered to their cost this season. Oranges will grow and fruit, in sheltered localities, in almost every county in the State, but to grow them for the market is another thing, especially when an extra cold spell comes along. Reckless real estate agents, who offer what they call orange land at low figures, have much to answer for. Good orange land, with ample water right, is cheap at $250 an acre. At anything less than that it is a bargain. Old Californians are paying as much as $400 an acre for first-class citrus land with an assured water right. It will cost them $150 an acre more before their trees are in bearing. It is therefore unreasonable to suppose that quantities of such land are going a begging at $100 an acre, or thereabouts. The Florida crange crop comes into market in the late fall and winter months, while California markets herefore unreasonable to suppose that quantities of such land are going a begging at $100 an acre, or thereabouts. The Florida crange crop comes into market in the late fall and winter months, while California markets herefore in the late winter and spring months. This has led many growers recently to plant the later varieties, which come on the market when the Florida crop is out of the way. One of the chief of these varieties is the Valencia, which has come into much favoring outside of the beaten track. It makes a larger tree than any other bedded variety, often growing to the size of the largest seedlings. It is thornless and a prolific, early bearer. The fruit hangs tenaciously and is not easily blown off the tree. The fruit is of fine quality and practically seedless. It is in market from May to August, and can be marketed much later. Another great advantage which this and other late varieties possess is that they escape a frost which smalls the earlier. great advantage which this and occase lafe varieties possess is that they escape a frost which spoils the earlier fruit. On this account there is likely to be an extensive planting of late va-to be an extensive planting rieties this season.

Last season's shipments of citrus fruits from Southern California amounted to about 4600 carloads, of which 700 carloads were lemons. Two months ago the estimates for this season was about 5000 carloads. Careful investigators put the loss by wind and frost at one-third of these figures, leaving for shipment about 3300 carloads. The total will probably fall below this, unless so much damaged fruit is sent away as to swell the figures. away as to swell the figures.

away as to swell the figures.

New plantings of orange and lemon groves during the past year have been immense. The San Bernardino County Horticultural Commission places the increase of orange orehards in that county alone for 1891 at 6602 acres, or 50 per cent. of the total acreage or 50 per cent. of the total acreage planted in all years prior to 1891. The same is true in regard to lemons, of which 350 acres were planted in 1891. Similar reports come from all orange-growing sections. The total number of orange trees planted in orchard in Southern California, but not yet bearing, is at least 8,500,000, and of bearing trees about 1,000,000, so that when, within three or four years, these trees are all in bearing, the total these trees are all in bearing, the total product, added to the increased prod-uct of trees now bearing, will—barring accidents—be at least four times as large as at present, or, say, 20,000 car-loads, worth, at $500 a car, $10,000,-

While it is true that these 20,000 carloads would give each family in the United States less than one orange a week for a year, yet it is evident that growers are wise in cooperating to oranize shipments and open up new mar-

Gool weather somewhat retards crops and grass.
Saticoy (L. P. Crane)—One and twentynine hundredths inches of rain fell during the week, making 6.38 inches for the season. Stockmen and farmers are satisfied with the outlook for a prosperous season.
Bendsdale (J. R. McKee)—During the first part of the month .88 inches of rain fellgently, thoroughly soaking the earth. The rains coming earlier this season, the cropoutlook is better than last year.

Lancaster (James P. Ward)—The weather is warm, making all kinds of vegetables grow rapidly. Grain is up and we are certain of making a good crop of hay and grain.

tain of making a good crop of hay and grain.

Rodeo de las Aguas Ranch (H. H. Denker)
—The weather has turned warm and pleasant and everything is growing nicely.
Plowing and sowing barley is still going on at a lively rate and will continue two weeks more. Rainfall for the season 6.53 inches. Verdugo (I. C. Sherer)—Farmers are busy plowing and tree planting and the hills are turning green, Oranges are being shipped by the carload from the Ross orchard. Rainfall for the season 6.58 inches.

Los Angeles, United States Weather Bureau (George E. Franklin)—Clear, warm weather following the late rains causes vegetation of every character to grow rapidly and is turning the hills green. The soil being in a favorable condition plowing and seeding is progressing actively. Early vegetables are coming into the local markets in greater quantities, especially green peas. The outlook for a prosperous season is very favorable.

Duarte (W. W. Bliss)—Warm sunshine is s very favorable.

Duarte (W. W. Bliss)—Warm sunshine is Duarte (W. W. Bliss)—Warm sunsnine is causing the grain crops to push forward rapidly and the crop conditions during the past week could not have been better. week last year .09 inches; for the season 5.30 inches, same date last season 5.30 inches. Highest temperature during the week 70°, lowest 36°.

Chino (Edwin Rhodes)—The weather the past week has been simply perfect for farm work and for the crops. About 300 acres have already been planted to sugar-beets, and they are coming up nicely. About fifty acres are being planted to beets every day. One and twenty-six hundredths inches of rain fell the first of the week.

Alessandro (Arthur Claffin)—The rain has laid the foundation for a prosperous year in this valley and a great deal of additional plowing is under way, which means a good grain crop. Fillaree is starting nicely, and in two weeks will provide good pasture. The prospect for general prosperity was never better. Rainfall for the week, 1 inch. Highest temperature, 69°; lowest, 32°.

Riverside (W. E. Keith)—It rained from st. 32°.

Riverside (W. E. Keith)—It rained from January 26 to February 8 inclusive; the ground is well soaked and the grain and hay crops promise to be abundant. Oranges are moving rapidly since the rain ceased. Rainfall for the week, 73 inch.
Ahaheim (M. Nebelung)—The warm, pleasant weather of the past week has put the soil in the very best condition for plowing and planting. Most of the grain has been sown and is showing up splendidly. Nursery stock is in very brisk demand. A large acreage will be planted to citrus and deciduous trees.

Santa Ana (H. A. Peabody)—Up to Monday, February 8, 5.33 inches of rain has fallen this season, and was followed by sunshine, which caused vegetation to grow failen this season, and was followed by sunshine, which caused vegetation to grow rapidly.

Tustin (E. D. Buss)—Additional showers early in the week gave us .30 of an inch more rain, and was followed by the finest of clear weather until today, February 12, when clouds prevail and more rain is indicated. The fair weather has started with quite a brisk orange shipment, and general farming conditions are most favorable.

San Diego, United States Weather Bureau (M. L. Hearne)—Farmers are busy cultivating and getting ready for the planting; since the rain the weather has been very favorable, warm with light winds. Grain and feed have made a wonderful growth during the past week. Indications at present are for a good crop of all kinds of grain. Farmers report ground fully saturated with water.

Campo (S. E. Gaskill)—The early-sown grain looks well and the late-sown is coming up finely. The rain was well distributed for moistening the earth and for growing crops.

THE CITRUS FAIR.

The Managers Worried Over a Prob lem in Proportion.

Three Times as Much Space Applied for as There is for Apportionment—The Appointment of the Judges-The Guarantee Fun

The Citrus Fair Executive Committee will meet next Tuesday to solve a prob-lem in preportion. Hazard's Pavilion, where the citrus fair is to be held, has about 2000 square feet of space on the main floor free from the gallery. Applications have already been received from various localities sufficient to cover this space three deep, and several counties are yet to be heard from. For the other 2000 feet on the main floor under the galleries, but one locality, San Diego, has applied. She wants 1200 feet, which will represent four different localities in that county. All other sections are after that 2000 feet in the center of the main floor. Some of the localities are not at all modest in their demands, and several of them would be entirely satisfied it they could individually occupy one-half of this choice space.

Santa Paula wants ninety square feet

Santa Paula wants ninety square feet and the rest of Ventura county would like 200 feet. They propose to build a derrick draped with vines and decorated with oranges.

Pomona writes that she is a modest little burg and all she wants is 480 feet for a table display. Pasadena wants—not the earth—but 400 feet right in the center of the hall, where she proposes to mount a large crown of she proposes to mount a large crown of oranges on eight octagonal columns. Under the crown and between these columns will be a booth for the display of fruit. Pasadena also makes reference in her letter of application to her extreme modesty. Orange wants 500 feet for her monster orange sixteen feet high; Ontario wants 500 feet, too, for high; Ontario wants 500 feet, too, for her big lemon and Riverside wants all she can get—500 or 600 feet or more. Colton requests 200 feet, Duarte 400 or 500 feet, the Upper San Gabriel 800 or 400 feet, while Alhambra and San Gabriel make the modest demand of 200 feet each. La Cañada wants quite a little space and Vernon would like the same amount she had last year; her dis-play will be mainly gotten up by the ladies. Redlands held her meeting yes-terday and has not yet been heard from and there are several other small local-terday and has not yet been heard from and there are several other small localties yet to be provided for.

All colors in decorations, except orange, lemon and green, are prohibited. A network of wire wound with ivy and studded with oranges with rows of incandescent lights down the center will cover the dome-like ceiling of the pavilion. An iron arch will be hoisted above the stage front covered with foliage, the studding and frieze of oranges and the whole aglow with incandescent lights. The names of the various localities will be worked in oranges against the green background. The railroads have made a generous concession in that the rates will be left open the entire week of the fair at one and one-third the usual fare.

The committee to raise the guarantee fund, Messrs. C. M. Wells, E. F. C. Klokke, Robert McGarvin, I. E. Mosher, John P. P. Peck and A. H. Neidig, will start out Monday morning to provide for the necessary $8000. The committee appointed to establish a standard for judging citrus fruits met yesterday and adopted a scale for the orange and lemon. The following gentlemen were present: Messrs. J. E. Cutter of Riverside, J. R. Dobbins of Alhambra and W. E. Collins of Ontario.

The following judges of the fair have been appointed:

A CALIFORNIA INVENTION.

A Machine That Fruit-growers Will Appreciate Heartily.

A California invention in the shape of a fruit-cutting and pitting machine is just now attracting much deserved attention. The ingenuity of the thing, and the exactness with which it does its work, are marvelous, and its implicit. simplicity, for it has neither cog, is no less so. It cuts the fruit en-tirely around, and pits it more care-fully than it can be done by hand. One man turns the crank and feeds it, and man turns the crank and feeds it, and the work is done with wonderful rapidity, six pits being 'extracted at each revolution of the wheel, whether the fruit be peaches of the largest size or plums of the smallest. The laventor, J. S. Briggs, claims that it is capable of handling one ton of apricots per hour, cutting the long way of the fruit. The machine has been thoroughly tested, 100 tons of apricots having been satisfactorily run through it the past season. It cannot but prove a great benefit to the fruit-growers of California. It is now on exhibition at No. 105 North Broadway (opposite The Times building.) where Mr. Briggs will be pleased to explain its workings to all who call.

Vile cod-liver oil has lost its vileness in Scott's Emulsion and gained a good deal in efficiency.

It is broken up into tiny drops which are covered with glycerine, just as quinine in pills is coated with sugar or gelatine. You do not get the taste at all.

The hypophosphites of lime and soda add their tonic effect to that of the half-digested cod-liver oil.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING-free.

The Eminent Chinese Physician.

observation, study and investigation, as fully as lay in his power to perfect himself in all branches of the art of healing human sickness and disease. Born in Chins, ot influential parents, of a family whose ancestors have been for generations deserfathers. In China he has practiced his profession for several years, being at one time a physician in the Imperial Hospital, and in America for a long time. His great number of patients, his wonderful and many cures, and the great list of letters from grateful and thankful patrons now prove him to be a remarkable and suc

DR. WOH:

I have doctored with the best physicians of San Francisco for my heart disease, but received no benefit. Thirty days ago I was recommended to you and began your freatment: before this, I was twice completely prostrated in the public streets, but today I am a well man and I thank you alone for my recovery. Respectfully.

537 Gladys ave., Los Angeles, Cal. January 10, 1892.

In Cleveland, O., many months ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, terminating in asthma. The doctors said there was no hope of my recovery, but that a change to California might prolong my life. February last I came to San Bernardin and doctored with three physicians ned no relief: finally Dr. Woh was recommended to me by a friend. I took his medicines and followed his directions and today I am perfectly well.

Oct. 30, 1891. San Bernardino, Cal.

For a long time I have been suffering with bladder and kidney troubles. No doctoring or medicines seemed to do me good. I consulted the best physicians and surgeons in Los Angeles city. They gave me morphine and drugs, but no relief could I obtain. After suffering great pain and having my passage almost entirely clogged. I fourteen days ago began using Dr. Woh's medicines. Today I am perfectly well. I do consider Dr. Woh the most successful physician in Southern California.

316 and 318-8. Main st., Los Angeles, Cal. October 13, 1891.

I have tried many doctors for heart disease but have derived no benefit until Dr. Woh, the Chinese physician, of Les Angeles City, prescribed for Two months ago I began his treatment and can now certify that he has done me great good. I recommend Dr. Woh great good. I recommend Pr. Woh Griends as an able doctor. P. E. KING.

ARE YOU MADE miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of appetite, Yellow Skin? Shiloh's vitalizer is a positive cure. Wholesale by Haas, Baruch & Co.; and all retail druggists. DR. HENLEY'S Celery, Beef and Iron will break up chills and build you up.

JOHN BECKWITH & SON, No. 303
North Main street, the druggists, take especial pleasure in supplying his customers with the best medicines obtainable. Among the many excellent preparations on his shelves may be mentioned Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a favorite during the winter months on account of its great success in curing colds. There is nothing that will loosen a severe cold so quickly, or so promptly relieve the lungs. Then it counteracts any tendency towards pneumonia-It is pleasant and safe to take, and fully worthy of its popularity.

THE REV. GEORGE H. THAYER of Bourbon, Ind., says: "Both myself and wife owe our lives to SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE." Wholesale by Haas, Baruch & Co.; and all retail druggists.

PHYSICIANS recommend Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron for broken-down con-stitutions.

IF YOU are troubled with the grip call on B. J. Woollacott, Nos. 124 and 126 N. Spring street, and purchase a bottle of Imperial Ry Whisky.

A Hundred and Sixty Miles of Southern California.

Brief Mention of All the Cities, Towns and Villages

On the Santa Fe's Famous Double Loop Railroad.

Where They Are and What They Do-What Even the Casual Visitor May See En Route-A Trip Well Worth the Taking.

A journey over the Santa Fé "kiteshaped track," starting eastward from Los Angeles, will carry the traveler through the principal section of Southern California, presenting a changing panorama of scenic beauties-mountains and valleys, orchards and vine-yards, fields and plains. From a wellwritten pamphlet recently issued by the general passenger department of the road is gleaned much intormation about the section traversed. After leaving Los Angeles the train passes through the suburbs of Lincoln Park, Garvanza, Highland Park and South Pasadena, past Raymond, where the big hotel is perched upon a hill, to Pasadena, which has a national reputation as a residence city, and its magnificent churches, libraries and other public buildings indicate the character of its citizens. The population is 10,-000. It is nine miles from Los Angeles, and connected therewith by two steam railroads running eighteen pas-senger trains each way daily. The grounds surrounding its residences are ornamented with choicest shrubs and flowering plants, which are in bloom in January as in June. Wilson's Peak, just north of Pasadena, where the larg-est telescope in the world is to be lo-cated, is reached by burro train over a good trail. An electric railway to the summit is projected. Hotel Green and the Painter Hotel are both first-class houses. A cannery, sash, door and blind factory, lumber yard and fruit crystal-izing works are the principal industries.

Lamanda Park, which comes next, sin and wine-growing.

Pomona has an excellent school sys-tem, and the largest public library in Southern California outside of Los An-

Claremont—A small village whose residents are engaged in the profitable industry of growing and marketing small fruits as well as oranges, lemons and olives. Pomona College is located here. North Ontario—A station located on the Ontario colony tract, north of the business center of the city of Ontario, with which it is connected by a streetcar line traversing the center of the renowned Euclid avenue. This street railway is something of a novelty, as the southward trip—a distance of seven miles—is made by gravity alone, the mules that labored so industriously in drawing the car to the top of the grade riding down on an ingeniously con-Claremont-A small village whose resi-

From Ontario two lines of railway connect with the town of Chino, on the great Chino ranch of 50,000 acres. The recently erected beet-sugar factory at this point gives it a special interest. During the past season (the first) there was manufactured here 180,000 pounds of sugar weekly.

San Antonio Cañon, a great hunting and fishing locality in the near-by mountains, is reached from North Ontario. There is a waterfall of considerable size in this cañon, and a stock company, with headquarters at Pomona, is engaged in developing electric power from this source. The power thus obtained will be used both for street railway, lighting and manufacturing. All way, lighting and manufacturing. The return trip to Los Angeles is made by way of the southern route, which runs by way of Cotton, three miles from San Bernardino, the junction point with the line of the Southern Pacific Company to Yuma. It is a growing and independent young city with a population of about 2000, well-graded streets lighted by electricity, and good business buildings. The manufacturing industries of the place include marble and building-stone quarries, lime kilns, flour mills, planing mills, and the Colton Frhit Packing Works, one of the largest establishments in Southern California. Dr. Howard E. Ames of the United States Dr. Howard E. Ames of the United States Navy, who has takens oprominent a part in the various discussions during the conven-tion of the American Public Health Associa-tion, is probably one of the most thoroughly informed men on the question of proper and nutritious food in the United States. particular attention is butterine, which he considers a far superior article of diet to butter.

"The reason it is not a more common article of diet," he explained to a reporter for the Star, "is because of a popular prejudice, founded largely upon imagination and careless statements made by many uninformed persons, and, as a matter of fact, there isn't one in 30,00 who can tell the difference between the two. The nutritious value is fully equal to that of butter; it is much cheaper, and when properly made will remain sweet and fit for consumption much longer.

"There might be some argument against butterine made in small establishments where the material from which it is made is allowed to accumulate for several days, but in the large establishments, like those in this city, where the material is taken from animals killed the same day, the butterine is more free from impurities than butter. There is more fermentation or putrefactive change in milk than the other materials, and the best butterine is that made with the least milk.

"The manufacture of butterine in properly constructed factories is much more clean, too, than the manufacture of butter, and the factories here, I notice, are nearly perfect in that respect. The matter used for and the factories here, I notice, are nearly perfect in that respect. The matter used fo coloring is in no way injurious, and the hig perfect in that respect. The matter used for coloring is in no way injurious, and the high temperature to which the materials are subjected perfectly sterilizes them. I have seen butterine and butter put up in cans at the same time, and when opened ten or twelve months later, the butterine was sweet, while the butter was rancid and unfit for use.

sweet, while the butter was rancid and unnt for use.

"The idea is to educate the people up to using it. I have recommended its use for the regular rations in the army and navy, and am satisfied that it will prove a better article of food than butter. It should be more generally used and not looked upon as an inferior article and makeshift for butter, when it is really superior."—[Kansas City Star.

Next comes San Bernardino, the county seat of San Bernardino county; population 10,000. This is one of the old California towns. It was first settled by Mormon colonists in 1851, but its growth as a city dates, like that of nearly every other city in Southern California, from the year 1886, the year in which direct rail connection with the East was formed by the extension of the great Santa Fé route to the Coast. It is a natural reservoir of immense proportions, hemmed in by great mountains. It is the source of the Santa Ana River and other smaller streams. The present gigantic enterprise is the completion of this mammoth reservoir by damming a great gorge high up in the mountains. The Bear Valley Lake abounds in trout, and the hunting in the timber is excellent. It is withal a cool retreat, and has come to be a local resort of considerable note. It is under some disadvantage, however, as it is necessary to travel several miles over a steep, narrow trail in order to reach the lake. This difficulty will soon be overcome, as a toll road is now under construction, and when completed a stage line will be operated from San Bernardino.
